VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff
FORT WORTH, Texas — The Pennsylvania senior Holstein dairy bowl team won the national contest last week during Junior Holstein competitions held in conjunction with the national convention of the Holstein Association USA Inc., at the Radisson Plaza Hotel in Fort Worth, Texas.

The four-member team from Cumberland County included Matthew and David Day, Heath

Ocker and John Creek. The coach was Ann Day, mother of Matthew and David. All are from Shippensburg and reside in close proximity.

The team won handily scoring a fairly wide margin even in the finals when they defeated a team from Wisconsin. There was a field of 21 teams from across the United States in the competition.

It was the fourth trip to the nationals for the Cumberland County team, and the second national title. The members are all now ineligible for further competition, having won the national title.

At last year's national Holstein convention, held in Pittsburgh, the team finished second.

In addition to the two national titles, over the team's past six years of dairy bowl competition, it also garnered four state Holstein titles and two state 4-H titles.

Matthew Day, speaking on behalf of the team, said the group has been working together studying and practicing for the competitions.

"We're relieved, now that it's all over, there's no more dairy bowl to study," Matthew said this week.

"It's really made it worth it. All the years of work have finally paid off," he said.

Matthew said he wanted to

Dairy Of Distinction Winners Named

KINGSTON (Luzerne Co.) — The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, known as the Dairy of Distinction program, has compiled the winners across Pennsylvania. The state has 10 districts, and this year 33 new farms have been named. During the last 10 years that the program has been in operation in Pennsylvania, 631 farms have received the award.

Farms are judged on the neat roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings by a team of local judges. The winning farms receive attractive 18 x 24 inch signs which are placed at the roadside. Judges return annually to ensure that the farms continue to meet the standards of excellence set by the program.

Seneca Valley Holsteins, Dale and Paula Wack, Harmony.
R-WES Dairy, Wesley Kiehl,

Beaver Falls.

Marburger Farm Dairy, Marge Wearing, Evans City.

District 13:

Penn-Dell Farm, Jay Houser, Spring Mills, PA 16875.
Whitman Farm, Randy Whitman, Cochranton.
Kent Kenyon, Coudersport.

District 14:

Sollenberger Farms, Byron Sollenberger, Curryville.
Stoney Hollow Jerseys, Don

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — From the road it's a pleasure to see another beautiful Dairy of Distinction gracing our countryside. A turn into the drive for a visit and you'll learn that this is a farm in transition from father to sons. Built on solid, productive Hagerstown soil, Kish-View Farm, along Route 655 near Belleville in Mifflin County, hopes to see another generation tilling its soil. Dave Spicher and sons Keith and Kent

Delmarva Broiler

JULY 3, 1996

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was good to very good. Offerings were closely cleared to fully adequate and sizes varied from plant to plant. Live supplies were moderate; weights were mixed in a full range of light to heavy. Processing schedules were moderate. Most plants plan to close tomorrow in observance of the holiday. Less than trucklot asking prices were generally unchanged at 60 to 74 cents. Trade sentiment was steady to firm. In the parts complex, bone-in breasts and leg quarters were no more than adequate. Other parts continued to clear well, however most items were adequate for immediate needs.

JUNE 28, 1996

Yolks traded in a wider price range, and most sales were unchanged to lower. The market tone was about steady for yolks, and no better than steady on the balance with whites in the weakest position. Demand was light, and most plants focused on filling previously negotiated commitments. Floor stocks were adequate. Edible liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection for the week ending June 22, 1996 in the Eastern region were 15% less than last week, and 13% less than last year.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO

JULY 2, 1996

Weather and reduced storage supplies keeping grain and soybean prices on a roller coaster. Downhill today. Wheat 9 to 15 cents lower. Corn 7 to 10 cents lower. Sorghum 15 to 20 cents lower. Soybeans 8 to 12 cents lower. Peak wheat harvest pressure with better than expected yields and quality, especially Hard Red Winter Wheat. Farmers are getting wheat out to follow with beans as rapidly as possible. Elevators refusing to except wheat with over 14 percent moisture in many places as many fields are weedy and grassy with too much green materials in the trucks. High prices for beans and farmers pushing to get wheat out and beans in as the season is growing late for planting and expecting over one half of a crop. Lot of beans still being drilled in flooded out grounds and water logged spots that were intended to be corn. Soybean stocks short, but price spread between new crop cash, 7.75 Kansas City and new crop 7.30 bids not as wide as for corn. Corn stocks are down 50 percent from a year ago, but demand has dropped the past three months. Export sales are off considerably. Cattle on Feed Report showed numbers down 11 percent and May placements down 22 percent. Hog numbers down 4 percent and breeding intentions down 5 percent. Poultry producers also cut back production intentions. U.S.D.A. raised estimated acres planted up 1/2 million. Hot weather, especially hot nights, good for corn. July cash corn hit record high prices this week, Kansas City 5.19, but most producers sold their holdings a long ago. Farmer holdings of corn down 62 percent from a year ago and new crop bids for this fall by Kansas City elevators 3.65 a bushel. Export News: Nothing new to report. Superior Broad Spectrum Disease Control With Dividend®

- Dividend seed treatment stops seed-borne scab, seed-borne septoria, seed rots, loose smut and Pythium*.
- Dividend treated wheat results in fast root development and quick seedling emergence, enhancing overall stand establishment.
- Dividend treated wheat has been shown in trials to increase yields over untreated wheat and wheat treated with other seed treatments.
- Dividend is safe to your crop—plant early or late, no-till or conventional tillage.
- Dividend offers the best worker safety profile available for seed treatments. It's less irritating to skin and eyes than other standard seed treatments—with less dust-off.

For more information on how to start your wheat in the right direction, contact

DEFINITION OF A POET

Not many of us think of E. B. White (born July 11, 1899) as a poet, though we may have known him as an essayist, humorist, letter writer, or New Yorker columnist. From an early age, however, he'd fallen "into questionable habits: I liked to rhyme one word with another..." and his characteristic humor and wit are easily recognized in his poems such as those defining a commuter or fashions in dogs. In his preface to Poems & Sketches of E. B. White, the author defined his terms: "To me, poetry is what is memorable, and a poet is a fellow or girl who lets drop a line that gets remembered in the morning." And sketches, he said, meant "everything in this collection that is not a poem."

three persons is a poet — either secretly or openly.*

— E. B. White

Farmers Provide American Way Of Life

We were reminded again this week as we celebrated Independence Day that many people in the history of our country have contributed to the blessings we enjoy. Even now, people in the U.S. Army, Navy, and Air Force are protecting our country overseas. Thomas Jefferson said that freedom must be continually earned.

At this time of year we think of what the American system really stands for: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights. That among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

While we hear a lot about the new freedoms in the Soviet Union, they still do not have enough to eat. If you want life and happiness, you really need to have enough food. That's where the American farmer has done so well for us. And the agricultural enterprises are of such importance to the American way of life that they also must be listed as important to our freedom.

Back in 1776, when our forefathers signed the Declaration of Independence, nine out of every 10 Pennsylvanians were farmers, self-sufficient and proud. Today, thanks to technological advancements and the strong work ethic in which those first Pennsylvanians believed, one farmer, on average, provides the food needs of 114 others.

There is no doubt about the power of Pennsylvania's food industry. This industry brings in $3.3 billion in farm income and leads to more than $32 billion in related business activity every year. But even these figures, as large as they may be, still do not show the true picture of the importance of Pennsylvania's ag community.

Every person who eats, and that is everyone, depends on agriculture for livelihood. The farmers who provide us with such an abundance of harvest not only form the base of our economy we call the American way of life, these farmers provide us with food, without which we have no physical life at all.

To Keep Dairy Cows Cool

Keeping dairy cattle cool in summer is a high priority task, according to Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent.

When cows are cooler, they consume more dry matter, produce more milk, retain more flesh, conceive better, have a stronger immune system, and fight off diseases and infections more effectively.

As dry cows and heifers approach calving, we want to protect them from heat stress. The last thing you want them to do is go off feed and draw down their energy and nutrient reserves prior to and shortly after calving. This could result in calving difficulties and serious metabolic problems.

Give the dry cows and late bred heifers the same good care you extend to the milking herd.

To Keep Cows To Breed Cool

Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent, reminds us that we also need to keep cattle in the breeding group from elevated body temperatures for a number of reasons.

High temperatures reduce the quality of the eggs produced. These eggs will mature and be ovulated about 60 days later. Depressed appetites caused by heat stress may cause cattle to go into a negative energy balance. This may have a negative impact on conception.

Excess body heat may also interfere with the implantation of the embryo in the uterus.

Be careful not to let cows in the breeding group get overheated prior to insemination. Avoid excess excitement and exercise and protect them from the hot sun. Also, try to help them stay cool for a few days after breeding to improve the implantation of the embryo.

To Be Safe

I am reading and hearing about too many farm accidents this summer.

The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health reminds us that forage wagons pose a safety risk to the operator. The hazards of forage wagons are not widely recognized.

An unguarded power take off (PTO) shaft which is used to power the wagon is capable of causing severe injuries through entanglement. Because of the way the equipment is used, a very cramped working environment is created. Operators are often tempted to step over an operating PTO shaft.

The following are some preventive ways to avoid entanglement:

- Equip all PTO drive lines with proper and functioning guards
- Never step over rotating PTO drive lines, even when proper guards are in place
- Shut off PTO drive lines when possible before dismounting the tractor
- Do not wear loose or bulky clothing around PTO drive lines
- Keep bystanders, especially children, away from PTO drive equipment
- Do not work alone around hazardous equipment.

Let's think safety and avoid any more serious farm accidents.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "Even in the smallest task, quality shines through."

YOUR REASON TO SING

YOUR REASON TO SING
July 7, 1996

Background Scripture:

Psalms 104

Devotional Reading:

Isaiah 40:25-31

Every day Valere and I pray for an ever-increasing list of people who are in need of healing and help. Some days, our listing of all these names seems very much like a shopping list that we have delivered to God, much in the way we might call the local grocery store to give them our list.

So, from time to time, something in us says, "Enough asking, now start praising!" Of course, all our prayers need to have some element of praise and thanksgiving. I know that, but often I become so involved in asking, that praise tends to get crowded out on a regular basis.

But, you might want to ask, if God is God, why does he need our praise? The answer, I believe, is not that God needs it, but that we do. The problem is not that God gets out of sorts when we fail to praise him, but that we do. Praising God is essential to our health and well-being.

BEHIND THE SONG

The 104th Psalm, one of our finest psalms of praise, is actually like a joyous song that the psalmist sings. Perhaps the Psalmist was moved by some personal experience. Why did the psalmist sing this song? What wonder, what gift, what grace did he experience to make him break forth in such rapturous verse?

But, even more important is the question of what would cause YOU to sing a psalm of praise to your Creator? The Psalmist says that he has been meditating upon God and his universe. He has been thinking of the wonders of the world and the blessings of his life and out of that thinking has grown an irrepressible urge to praise God. Maybe you do that on a regular basis; but, like me, maybe you get too wrapped up in telling God what to do.

On what should we meditate? Let's see what the Psalmist considered in his mind and heart. The late Professor of Old Testament, Samuel Terrien, has analyzed the 104th psalm and called it a psalm of "The Lord of the Seven Wonders." The first of these, vs. 2-4, is the wonder of the sky.

WRAPPED IN LIGHT

A month ago, while sailing on the Arabian sea, I gathered with fellow passengers on the deck of the Royal Viking Sun to see a new comet. To help us see better, the captain had most of the lights momentarily extinguished. The heavens that stretched out above were staggering! I felt as the Psalmist must have felt when he wrote: "He is wrapping himself with light as with a garment; He spreadeth out the heavens as a curtain (trans. by S. Terrien, The Psalms And Their Meaning Today, Bobbs-Merrill, 1952). When was the last time you stood under a star-crowded sky and praised the Creator?

The Psalmist also praised God for the earth (vs. 5-9), for water (vs. 10-13), vegetation (vs. 14-18), moon and sun (vs. 19-23), and the sea (vs. 24-26). All of these, when we give ourselves time to think upon them, are great wonders that most of the time we take for granted. But, if from time to time we meditated upon them, we would likely end up praising God. The reason, then, that we don't praise God more is that we just don't think enough about his wonders.

Finally, the Psalmist lists the seventh and greatest wonder of all, the gift of life (vs. 27-30). The Psalmist observes nature and the creatures of the world and he sees that all of us are dependent upon the goodness of God: "These all look to thee, to give them their food in due season . . . when thou takest away their breath, they die and return to their dust. When thou sendest forth the Spirit (or "breath"), they are created; and thou renewest the face of the ground" (RSV, vs. 27, 29b, 30). Can you possibly think upon the precious gift of life and not break forth in praise? I have something to sing about. What about you?

Editor:

My name is Janelle Swingle and I was recently elected Wayne County Dairy Princess. I consider this both an honor and a privilege. With this title comes a very special opportunity and responsibility. It is now my job to help spread the word about the quality and versatility of dairy products. It is my sincere hope that I might be allowed to use your paper as one of these resources. Periodically, I would like to submit an article with some brief localized information, such as upcoming events that I or my Dairy Princess Alternate Jessica Chyle will be involved in. I would also like to submit information about local promotions and happenings in our lives as daughters of dairy farmers and Dairy Princesses.

You may be curious as to why I have written to a paper centered so far from home. The answer is quite simple. I don't know of a farmer in our area that doesn't either receive your paper directly or borrows it from a neighbor when they are done with it. I'm not sure my Grandpa could survive without his copy! It hardly has left the mailman's hands when he is at the mailbox, my Dad is not quite that bad, but almost. You should see them if it comes late, it just puts a big damper on the weekend, let me tell you! Thank goodness that very seldom happens. I know there are others just like them and I feel I could reach a great many through your paper.

Whatever you decide, I'm glad to at least have an opportunity to tell you how much your paper is enjoyed and looked forward to in our northeast corner of Pennsylvania.

Thank you for your time and wishing you a happy summer.

Late Blight? Early Start.

CHAMP Flowable Formula 2 Fungicide:
The Blight Heavyweight.

What can we tell you about late blight that you probably don't already know? After all, it's your potatoes — and your livelihood — that are on the line.

In order to control late blight, you need to get an early start — a total disease management program that includes good growing practices and proper use of foliar fungicides. And that's where CHAMP Formula 2 comes in.

The Copper Fungicide That Doesn't Act Like One.

The neat part about CHAMP Formula 2 is that it's every bit as effective as the products shown in the field test data below — it delivers the maximum amount of active ingredient and measures up in performance. See for yourself.

Statistically, there was no significant difference between treatments.

Use CHAMP Formula 2 in a combination spray program or in alternating sprays.

In Every Way, You Win With CHAMP Formula 2.

Consider these additional benefits — with CHAMP, there's no residue tolerance restrictions and you can spray right up to the day of harvest in whatever quantity and number of applications is necessary for your situation. CHAMP Formula 2 has also been shown to be effective, even when there are resistance problems with other compounds. And it's very cost effective when compared to other products on the market.

So, let's review: Late blight? Start early with a season-long disease management program using CHAMP Formula 2. It's available in 2.5-2 gallon pugs and 90 gallon drumbulk containers. See your nearest dealer or an Agrol rep representative today.

Seventh Ag Horizons Conference Approaches

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Convinced that Property Rights and Rural/Urban Interface are two of the most critical issues facing Pennsylvania agriculture today, the 1996 Ag Horizons Planning Committee has scheduled experts to discuss both topics at its upcoming Conference.

The Ag Horizons Conferences are designed to provide ag educators (Penn State Extension staff, instructors of vocational agriculture and young farmer adult advisers) with an opportunity to be updated annually on cooperative and agricultural developments impacting farmers in eastern and central PA.

The Wildwood Conference

Center of Harrisburg Area Community College will be the setting for the seventh annual conference scheduled for Tuesday, July 30, 1996. The Conference begins at 9 a.m. with registration and a continental breakfast, includes lunch, and will conclude at approximately 3 p.m.

Discussing Property Rights will be Dr. John Becker, Professor of Agricultural Law and Economics at Penn State; John Barley, PA State Representative; and Turner Odell, Staff Attorney, PA Office of the Chesapeake Bay Foundation. After presenting their viewpoints, Dr. Diane Brown, Associate Dean, College of Agricultural Sciences at Penn State will moderate an open forum.

Feeder Cattle Grading Workshop Set

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — For the past 3 years, Penn State Cooperative Extension, The Pennsylvania Beef Council, and a group of animal health companies have sponsored and conducted a summer cattle evaluation workshop. The workshop enabled producers to participate in live animal grading, beef quality assurance training, and meat industry issue discussions.

This year the workshop will address the subject of "feeder cattle" grading, again enabling all participants the opportunity to evaluate and score several head of young cattle. The workshop will also provide insight on buying feeder cattle in today's economic climate.

The Feeder Cattle Grading Workshop will be held on Wednesday, July 31 at the New Holland Sales Stables. The program begins at 7:30 p.m. but cattle producers are invited to an ice cream social beginning at 6:30 p.m. The social provides an opportunity to visit with cattle industry experts, animal health suppliers, financial specialist, and fellow cattle feeders.

Workshop presenters include Dr. Phil Osborne, West Virginia University; Dwayne O'dell, cattle grader with the West Virginia Dept. of Agriculture and Dr. John Comerford, Penn State extension beef specialist.

The grading of feeder cattle is an important tool for projecting finished weights of slaughter cattle. Workshop participants will learn how to frame and muscle score feeder cattle and will participate in projecting days on feed, average daily gain, and slaughter weight. Your grades and estimates can be compared to those of a panel of experts. Economic factors involved when buying feeder cattle will also be discussed.

thank his mother for being coach, and all the agribusinesses for supporting the team when it earned the opportunity to go to the national contests. The team attended four national Holstein conventions, traveling to places from Salt Lake City to Fort Worth. It also attended the national 4-H contest in Louisville, Kentucky, through industry support.

In a letter to supporters that all members of the team signed, they stated, "None of these awards would have been possible without all the wonderful support of our friends in the dairy industry." The also stated, "With (that) support we have been able to expand our horizons in the dairy industry, meet many new friends, and promote agriculture at every stop in the road."

Matthew also said that each member of the team learned to depend on each other.

"I think each member of the team would like to thank the other three for being there for them," Matthew said.

"The knowledge that we gained of the dairy industry through the dairy bowl (competitions) not only allows us to understand now what's going on in the dairy industry, but it also helps all of us understand better in the future what is involved in the dairy industry."

All the team members' families live near each other.

Curtis and Ann Day own Tri-Day Holsteins farm in Shippensburg. Heath Ocker's parents, John and Linda Ocker, used to have an Ayrshire farm, but sold out and John keeps a couple of registered Ayrshires on a neighboring farm.

John Creek's parents, Bob and Patty Creek, live on a sheep farm and John keeps some Holsteins with the Tri-Day herd for showing and raising.

According to Matthew the close proximity not only helped the team members get together frequently and more easily for practices, but the families all mutually supported each other in pursuing learning about the dairy industry.

A team to follow up this one for Cumberland County hasn't yet developed. Ann said she would probably stay on as coach, if county youth come forward and express an interest in participating. Those interested can call her at home.

As far as the future of the members of this year's team, Matthew said that, having graduating high school this year, he is planning on attending Cornell University in the fall to begin studies in pursuit of a degree in veterinary science.

He said that Heath Ocker will be a sophomore at Lebanon Valley College where he is studying engineering and playing football. He was a high school football stand-out, according to Matthew, as well as a baseball player, having played in the Little League World Series.

Matthew's young brother David and John Creek are to be juniors in high school this fall.

Matthew said David plays soccer and has been interested in studying the history of Holsteins.

John also plays soccer, is on the high school track team, and favors wildlife conservation.

For himself, Matthew has also participated in dairy judging contests in 4-H and at the nationals, and he played soccer and baseball in high school.

During the Holstein convention, Matthew also received the honor of being recognized as a junior progressive breeder, for having bred a cow that produced more than 30,000-pounds of milk in a 305-day lactation. While his bred

Howard, Cope Re-Elected To Board Of Holstein Association USA

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff
FORT WORTH, Texas — John Cope of Grantham was re-elected to a second one-year term as president of the Holstein Association USA Inc., and fellow Pennsylvanian John Howard, of Willow Street, was re-elected to a second four-year term on the board of directors, during proceedings of the organization's national convention, held June 24-25 in Fort Worth, Texas.

Cope and Howard were joined in being re-elected to their respective leadership posts by Richard Keene, of Gilbertsville, N.Y., who was re-elected vice president, and board member Tom Nunes, of Santa Rosa, Calif.

New board members elected during the convention were Randolph Gross, of Valleyford, Washington, and Ray Ruby, of Scio, Oregon. Both are to serve four-year terms.

The elections of officers was but one of the many activities and acts of business conducted during the 111th annual meeting and convention of the association.

An estimated 1,300 people participated in the annual convention, including about 400 Junior Holstein members.

In his president's address, Cope said that change for the organization was still as ominous as it has been for the past several years, as a number of factors affecting the dairy industry and thus the Holstein industry continue to drive that change.

Two milestones were achieved this past spring by the association, according to Cope. He said that a $3.3 million new computer system by Hewlett Packard, complete with personal computer-server technology has been installed and paid for.

Also, outstanding debt on the association's Brattleboro, Vermont headquarters building has been paid off.

Both projects were paid for money earned through what Cope described as, "A very robust performance of our investment portfolio in the reserve fund."

The association's reserve fund principal remains intact.

The new computer system was completed May 1, after four years of planning and implementation.

Among other issues, Cope said that members also have to consider the issue of how the association is governed.

"Your board has been studying the governance question not only from a delegate and convention aspect, but also viewing governance issues from board and member structure," he said.

"The basic issue is, how best to govern in rapidly changing times?" he said. "Should board restructure occur? Should the delegate process be changed? How do we organize to meet members' needs in an industry with increasing challenges to our economic well-being?"

He said efforts to study that issue are to continue and members are urged to consider the questions and the situations and help provide input that can help the association continue to provide quality and valuable service.

Another issue for members to consider is the possibility of joint ventures, according to Cope.

"This fall, the Executive Committee of Holstein USA and the Executive Committee of Holstein Canada will meet together to explore joint venture initiatives," Cope said. "Should we be thinking in terms of North American Holsteins, joint work processing, breed promotion and (other joint ventures)? We are very excited about Canada's interest to explore these possible joint initiatives."

Cope also reported that, in March, the Holstein Association USA board of directors and the National DHIA board held a joint session.

"This initiative resulted in agreements by both organizations to begin promotion of the American ID numbering system for the entire dairy industry and hopefully to encompass all United States livestock at some point in time."

According to Cope, efforts are already underway to seek grants to initiate a pilot study for implementing a national or American cattle identification numbering system.

"The pilot project will demonstrate how a national ID data base can be used for accurate premise origin of animals, disease prevention and control, rapid response to a disease outbreak and better genetic evaluations."

In other action, membership approved several bylaw changes focusing on two main areas.

The first change to Holstein bylaw as proposed by the board of directors was to amend Article IV, Section 15 (b) to allow the association access to all cattle records of concern, including those from the Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA) system, and even certain records kept by receiving plants.

In the comments provided with the proposal, it was stated, "Given the changing production testing environment, the association's capacity to verify production records may decrease."

"The use of bulk tank pick-up records maintained by the milk plant may be increasingly helpful. In extreme cases, the cooperation of the milk plant in providing cryoscopic (freezing point) results could be very helpful."

"These records relate to a herd rather than individual cows. This bylaw, as written, focuses on the individual animal and it is now apparent that herd records are equally important."

The approved amendment is, "The association shall have access to and may obtain and use all records on all animals registered, recorded or identified with the association, whether maintained by the owner or by others, including without limitation, breeding, production, health, laboratory and any and all herd records including cryoscopic test results and bulk tank pick up weights maintained by the milk processing plant or maintained within the DHIA system."

The rest of the bylaw changes concerned several distinct items within Article IV, Section 23. While each aspect was considered separately, all were approved.

Paragraph 1, related to association fees, was approved to read, "The fee for recording a transfer shall be $10 if the application is received within 30 days after the date of change of ownership; $12.50 if received between 30 days and 60 days; and $15 if received after 60 days; except that the fee shall be $5 if the change of ownership is required where no actual sale has been made, but where transfer of ownership is required because of the death of a member, or is to a member of one's immediate family."

That represents a change from a fee of $10 if the registration application is received within 45 days, and $25 thereafter.

On June 30, a moratorium on the $25 fee for late registration ended that had been in place since Nov. 6. The moratorium was enacted because it became apparent that a number of owners were not applying because of the cost.

Also approved for change under Article IV, Section 23 was the first paragraph under Duty of Owner.

"It shall be the duty of the record owner of an animal, when such animal changes ownership, to submit within 30 days an application for transfer or to agree to the change of ownership through other authorized procedures for changing ownership on the records of the association as prescribed by the board of directors."

A paragraph was added under the heading of Short Term or Interim Ownership, which follows the Duty of Owner, under Article IV, Section 23.

"The board of directors may define procedures with terms and conditions under which short term or interim ownership will be recorded for specifically identified heifer raisers and cattle agents. The board of directors shall define the criteria by which changes of ownership within or from these entities may be made and such changes of ownership may be at rates less than those specified in these bylaws."

In awards presentations, Duane and Mary Nelson of Winthrop, Minnesota, were honored as the association's 1995 Distinguished Young Breeder Award recipients.

According to information provided by Holstein Association, the Nelsons both grew up on commercial dairy farms and started building their herds through 4-H and FFA projects. Shortly after getting married in 1981, they started Daggett Brook dairy farm on rented property that they purchased in 1988.

Their herd consists of both Ayrshires and Holsteins with the rolling herd average (RHA) of the Holsteins at 24,109 pounds of milk, 918 pounds fat, and 755 pounds protein. The RHA of their Ayrshires is 19,338 pounds milk, 796 pounds fat and 634 pounds protein. It is the top Ayrshire herd in Minnesota.

In other awards, Kelly Myers, of New Windsor, Md., Timothy Perotti, of Millerton, N.Y., Andrea Steffens, of Clermont, Iowa, and Mark Ulness, Valdres, Wis., were named the six finalists of the association's Distinguished Junior Member competition.

The six finalists were selected from 12 semi-finalists from applications from across the country.

To be eligible for national recognition, participants must win at the state level. The six finalists all received a lifetime membership to the Holstein Association.

Leola Weather Station Vital For Disease Forecasting

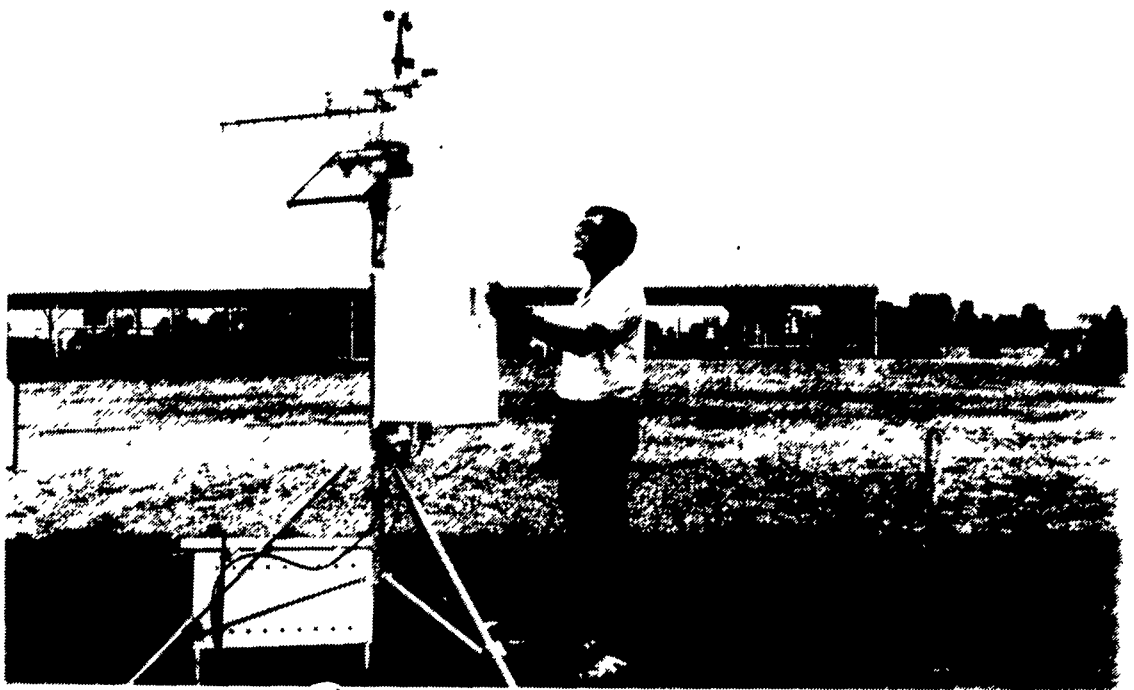

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
LEOLA (Lancaster Co.) —
Plant disease predictions can be summed up like this:

If thus, then so.
In other words, according to Penn State plant pathologists and extension experts, a combination of factors, including temperature, dew levels, humidity, and other conditions work together to create disease pressure. And those factors must be measured to give any kind of forecast for fruit and vegetable growers.

It also helps if specialists have the right equipment to make those measurements.

Now Penn State has a new tool for southeast Pennsylvania growers practically right in the growers'

A Few Reservations Left For FFA Dinner/Auction

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — It's every committee's dream, and every event coordinator's headache, to have a sold-out event and more people wanting to participate.

But that's the case with this year's fourth annual Hoss's Fore FFA golf tournament, set to be held July 15 at Foxchase Golf Course in Denver, Lancaster County.

Thanks to an overwhelming response from sponsors and golfers, if reservations for a golf slot haven't been made, it is too late.

But it is not too late to make reservations for attending the evening dinner and auction.

The dinner/auction that follows the morning and early afternoon golf tournament is shaping up to be quite an event on its own.

In addition to a social hour and a steak dinner, the entertainment value of the auction alone is worth the $25 dinner/auction ticket price, according to a news release made this week.

According to Pennsylvania FFA Foundation President Glenn Wenger, a limited number of dinner/auction-only reservations are available.

In addition to the standard auction bill of sports tickets, a football autographed by Joe Paterno, this year's sale is to include some new additions.

According to Bob Lauffer, agriculture instructor at Garden Spot High School, and auction coordinator, this year's auction offerings are to include a signed and numbered Ned Smith print depicting two otters at play.

The print was made a gift to the foundation by the Pennsylvania Game Commission several years ago. The late Ned Smith is a famous, self-taught wildlife artist, considered by some to be the Norman Rockwell of wildlife art.

His prints and paintings are well-known and collected and have served as fund-raising offerings by wildlife groups such as Ducks Unlimited and Trout Unlimited.

"Since we received the print, we have been looking for the right time and place to sell it for its intended fund-raising potential," Lauffer said. "Depending on who you ask, the print could be worth more than $1,000. We're hoping that this group will realize the value of the Ned Smith name."

Many of the auction items will showcase the talents and skills of FFA members, such as an oak and a treated lumber picnic table, a gun cabinet and a jewelry box.

In addition, this year's auction also features other youth-produced quality products such as Tilapia (St. Peter's fish) and catfish filets from an FFA classroom aquaculture project, and plants grown in an

FFA chapter greenhouse.

Additionally, this year with the help of local businesses, the Cedar Crest Young Farmers and FFA chapter are to bring a registered Holstein calf to the event for participants to bid upon. Half of the money raised is to go toward the FFA and the Young Farmers groups and half is to go toward the FFA Foundation.

The bidder of the calf won't actually receive the animal. In fact the calf that will be displayed isn't actually being sold. The funds raised ($400 by sponsors thus far this week) are to be used to purchase a registered calf and to donate it to a deserving FFA youth to be raised and shown as a project animal.

The best part of the whole event, according to co-chairpeople Sam Sherk of Penn Ag Industries and Nancy Campbell of Hoss's Steak and Sea House, is the support it provides to the more than 8,300 FFA members across Pennsylvania.

"It's about these young men and women, and the future of agriculture in Pennsylvania," according to Sherk and Campbell. Their statement echos a unanimous statement from the FFA Foundation Board of Trustees.

The golfing portion of the event is an afternoon 18-hole shotgun tournament.

However, this year there is an added morning golfing event with FFA members and invited guests to participating. It is co-sponsored by Hatfield Quality Meats and AT&T.

According to Sherk, the morning activity was created to allow FFA members to continue to participate in golfing, while freeing up slots for the afternoon tournament.

"This tournament is ultimately about the FFA members," Sherk said. "Hatfield has always been very involved with the afternoon tournament. Joining up with AT&T, they have the morning golf event possible, which allows to keep FFA members involved and accommodate a full field in the afternoon event."

Additionally, this year with the help of local businesses, the Cedar Crest Young Farmers and FFA chapter are to bring a registered Holstein calf to the event for participants to bid upon.

The bidder of the calf won't actually receive the animal. In fact the calf that will be displayed isn't actually being sold. The funds raised ($400 by sponsors thus far this week) are to be used to purchase a registered calf and to donate it to a deserving FFA youth to be raised and shown as a project animal.

As of this week, calf sponsors included Richard Kreider of Pioneer Seeds Co., John Eaton and Mike Firestone on behalf of Lebanon Valley National Bank Ag Lending Group, Wencrest Farm, owned by Glenn and Steve Wenger, and the Cedar Crest Young Farmers.

Don't Let Your Cows Be Poisoned

I had a call last week from Dr. Laffey, Cochranville veterinarian, to tell me he had his first case for 1996 of an animal dying from eating branches from a yew bush.

I sent a press release to all the county papers asking suburbanites to not dispose of their ornamental shrubbery cuttings in a neighboring pasture field.

The number of cases of plant poisoning in livestock far outweighs those reported for humans. With the increase of suburbia in Chester County, it is important that both the rural and suburban populace understands the danger that certain plants can pose to livestock.

The following list includes some of the problem plants.

Yews — In Europe it is considered the most poisonous tree or shrub. A fatal mistake can be made by placing branches in an animal enclosure. Death can be very rapid and recovery is rare.

Wild Cherry — Probably the most common cause of livestock poisoning. It usually occurs when limbs are blown down or are trimmed and thrown into the pasture. The most toxic level is reached when the leaves have wilted. Leaves, twigs, bark, and cherry pits all produce toxicosis. Animals bloat and die within a few hours.

Garden Iris (Flags) — There is an irritant in the leaves and rootstock which can cause gastroenteritis if ingested in sufficient amounts.

Holly — The berries are poisonous. However, they are not very palatable for livestock, but they can present a problem for small children.

Morning Glory — The leaves and stems are toxic and the seeds in some species are hallucinogenic. Prolonged consumption can cause death.

Bracken Ferns — The entire plant is poisonous in a fresh or dried condition. It may take 1 to 3 months after ingestion for symptoms such as elevated temperatures, swelling of the neck, and difficult breathing to occur.

Rhubarb — The flat leaf blade is the toxic part that produces oxalic acid. Staggering, excessive salivation, and convulsions can lead to death within 3 to 5 hours.

English Ivy — The small black berries and leaves are poisonous if consumed in quantity.

Oaks — Acorns and young shoots can cause poisoning, especially if eaten in quantity. They are more of a problem on western rangelands.

Mountain Laurel, Rhododendron, and Azalea — These ornamentals of the Ericaceae family are highly toxic to ruminant animals. Death is often preceded by a coma.

Farmers and their neighbors need to work together to prevent serious problems and possible death to livestock from poisonous plants.

LARRY SPECHT
Penn State University
Dairy Specialist

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Much of the genetic progress made by the U.S. dairy industry over the past 30 years is due to the large-scale progeny testing of young dairy bulls by the major artificial insemination (AI) businesses.

USDA studies show that prior to 1965 genetic gain was minimal. For every good bull that was located there was another one that contributed nothing.

By 1960, the AI industry realized that a steady supply of herd improving bulls could be found through an organized sampling program, much like that employed by the plant breeders and the poultry industry. Within five years, most AI organizations had established good sampling programs and genetic progress began to accelerate.

None of this would have been possible without the systematic collection of production information on the daughters of the bulls under test.

This role was, and still is, being filled by the Dairy Herd Improvement Association.

The procedure used to test sires is to first mate the top AI sires to the elite cows of each breed to produce the young males that will be tested.

When the young sires are 12 to 15 months old they are each bred to 500 to 800 or more production-tested cows. This usually results in 50 to 80 or more daughters in herds on test.

It is intended that the daughters will be well distributed across herds with no more than one or two daughters in each of 50 or more herds.

When the daughters calve as 2-year-olds, their production is recorded by DHIA technicians as the technicians move about in the circle of herds they are responsible for testing.

The physical traits for each daughter group are also evaluated by AI personnel and/or breed organization employees.

When all data are in, AI management makes the decision on each sire as to whether he is superior enough to his contemporaries to enter the sire lineup for regular service, or if he is to be culled. Only 10 to 15 percent of young sires make it back into regular service.

The DHIA testing program has been an integral part of genetic progress. Without records to evaluate sires and cows we would have no way of knowing which sires will advance genetic merit.

There are many changes underway in both the AI and DHIA programs. There will be fewer AI and fewer DHIA organizations.

With all of the cost-cutting measures being put in place, we must be careful not to compromise the accuracy of the production recording process to the point where it will limit genetic progress.

Neither can we afford to markedly reduce the number of young sires tested each year.

Testing young sires is expensive, as it involves not only the purchase price, the feeding, care and housing for four years or more, but it includes as well the data collection and evaluation that must happen before decisions can be made.

If we do not continue to do a good efficient job of progeny testing our young dairy sires, and in measuring the results, there are other countries eager to replace us as the world's leading supplier of dairy genetics.

Kish-View Farm Moves Toward Next Generation

hope that the planning and sound advice they sought will insure the same during this time of change.
Dave's home since he was 13, Kish-View's rich soil supports three families, 140 Holsteins on test, plus young stock. Spichers milk in a 40-stanchion barn. The herd spends most of its time in the free stall. The Spichers own 117 tillable acres and rent another 158. They grow 135 acres of corn and 115 of alfalfa. Spichers house calves in two 7-stall calf condos and utilize two silos for hayage, two for corn and one for high moisture corn. Being fussy about forages helps them maintain their 21,000 lb. herd average.
The Spichers consulted outside experts when arranging a partnership that would give the best chance for livelihood for the next generation. The relied on advice from Penn State's Cooperative Extension Service and use Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's record keeping system.

Dave Spicher began the transition by turning more and more responsibilities over to the boys. Dave and Keith formed a partnership in 1990, then Kent entered it in 1991. This past January, they became responsible for the book work, and the housing arrangements changed.

Keith, who just moved into the main farmhouse with his wife Gina, son Aaron, 6, and daughter, Morgan, 4, maintains the herd's records, registers calves on the computer, records herd health and breeding on computer, and maintains and repairs machinery.

A small pasture separates Kent's home from the main farm buildings. He lives with his wife Stacey and daughter Paige, 7 months. Kent checks the crops and maintains the farms' financial records.

Dave and his wife Effie just built a home along Maple Grove Road, a road that borders the back part of the farm. He comes to the farm every day to do his part because, he says, "After all the duties have been divvied up, all that's left for me to do is work!"

"We're not ready to let him go yet," both Keith and Kent agree.

Both also agree that the slower transition enabled each son to grow into the operation.

"We didn't just go out and buy 100 cows," Keith says. They own nearly 1/2 of the cows. Any new machinery bought will be purchased by the partnership. Eventually, they'll buy their father's machinery and the farm.

Transition in a farming operation means not only property and management changes, but changes in priorities and views too. Kish-View's farm office, lined with trophies, ribbons, and banners from county, district and state shows, symbolize Dave's pride in his lineage of award-winning registered Holsteins. He has shown cows for 27 years and has served on the ASC committee, the Select Sires board, the show committee of the Holstein Association, the county committee of Sire Power as well as many other organizations.

But Keith and Kent's priorities are different because of growing families, their responsibilities on the farm, and other interests like hunting. And with a business in transition, each looks at the farm from a different perspective.

"I would sooner have less cows to milk, but you need the volume (of milk) or you can't stay in business," Dave reflects. All three expect to gradually expand the herd. While Dave takes care of the breeding and takes pride in pedigreed animals, milk production, for now, means more to Keith and Kent. Kent questions the value of registered cows.

"We don't market our own cattle. We raise our own replacements. If we buy extra cows to increase the herd, we will not pay extra money for registered animals."

Their priorities may be different, but over all, Dave, Keith and Kent tend to agree on the major decisions. Eventually, they want to build a milking parlor and another free stall building.

"We talk about it every day," Keith says of their future plans. But Keith and Kent have chosen to tackle the future as carefully as they've faced the partnership, ensuring solid ground for Kish-View's future.

POURED SOLID CONCRETE

START WITH THE BEST!

POURED CONCRETE WALLS

You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs. more per cubic foot! Far denser. What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic - there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration.

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced.

Solid Concrete For:

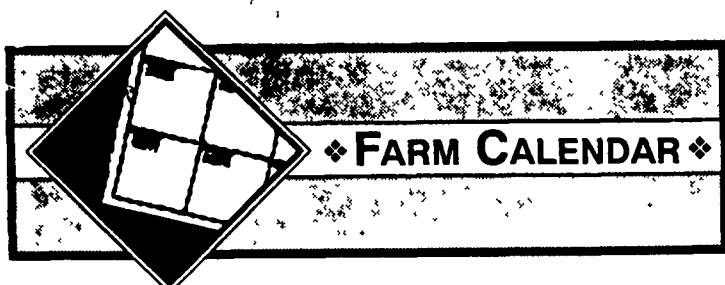

- Manure Pit Walls
- Hog House Walls
- Barnyard Walls
- Chicken House Walls
- Retaining Walls
- House Foundation Walls
- Silage Pit Walls
- Cistern Walls
- Concrete Decks
- Concrete Pit Tops

Directions - From Interstate 395 at Exit 97 Take Rt. 44 West, Then Rt. 171 West To Fairvue Farms

Fairvue Farms History

Fairvue Farms began in 1962 when Paul Miller and his mother purchased the farm and milked 40 cows in the stanchion barn. In 1967, Paul and his wife Diane purchased the farm from his mother and they built a freestall barn to house the cows. A few years later they built a double five milking parlor. They added a second barn to house the additional cows they raised. Over the years additional property was purchased, and in 1994 their son David became a partner in the business. In 1995, construction was completed for a new state-of-the-art milking center.
The Millers now have 442 milking Holsteins and 377 Heifers. They have one of the top producing herds in the county and milk 3 times a day.
They farm 990 acres and grow 425 acres of corn and 395 acres of grass and alfalfa.

Enclosed please find a small article from my husband's 446th Bomb group newsletter. John was stationed in the East Anglia area of England during WWII.

Farming is a dangerous business, as we all know. But this is one hazard that we do not have. Maybe you will want to use this in connection with your farm safety series.

TRACTOR UNEARTHS BOMB

A recent article in a Norwich, England paper

time bomb which came within inches of killing him.

The tractor driver ploughed up the high explosive bomb that had lain buried for more than half a century. It belonged to a Liberator bomber which crashed in north Norfolk on its way to the D-Day invasions.

Bomb disposal experts said Mr. Hunt had a narrow escape—and let him have the honour of detonating the bomb at Northrepps near Cromer. "You could feel the ground shake. It was a heck of a bang, and it is only now that I am realizing how lucky I was," he said.

He was ploughing near Hungry Hill when his Ford tractor ground to a halt on Wednesday afternoon. He jumped from the cab to find a rusty cylinder stuck in the blades. "I soon realized it was a bomb and called for help. It was not until the next day they told me what could have happened," said 45-year-old Mr. Hunt from Trimmingham.

A bomb disposal spokesman said it was "only a matter of luck"

MADISON, Wis. — An opportunity to visit dairy farms in Australia and New Zealand is part of World Dairy Expo's 1997 Expo Expedition. The January 9-23 tour highlights include visits to dairy farms in Australia and both islands of New Zealand including overnight stays with farm families.

The trip will include stops at Australia's International Dairy Week and New Zealand's first Dairy Expo along with spare time to enjoy some of the world's most scenic areas. This two-week ex-the plough did not hit the fuse of the 50kg bomb packed with 30kg of high explosive. "If that had happened, the farm worker would have been a very ex-farm worker, and debris from the explosion would have been spread over a 700 meter radius," he added.

Locals knew there was a missing bomb in the field, when the B-24 from Hethel crashed on June 5, 1944, on its way to a 300 plane raid on the Normandy beaches as part of D-Day. Ten crewmen were killed, and one of the bombs was unaccounted for.

pedition combines business education and vacation all into one value-priced tour.

Overnight stays on homesteads are in Holbrook, Australia and Christchurch and Waikato, New Zealand. Australia's other stops include: Riverina Artificial Breeders, a world leader in cattle genetics, dairy research and exporting of cattle, Shepparton the host for International Dairy Week and Yarra Glen for a tour of a state of art, private cheese processor.

Then it's on to New Zealand's South Island for a tour of a 630-cow Holstein herd in Christchurch. Travel over Burke's Pass alongside Lakes Tekapo and Pukaki to Mount Cook National Park. And for the more adventurous at heart it's bungee jumping in Queenstown or a cruise on a vintage steamer for dinner.

Finish off the trip on New Zealand's North Island at the Argodome Farm Show and a trip to the Rotorua district and Waikato for two more farm stops.

Initial deposits are due in September. Call now for a brochure with complete details. Contact Marlene Schmidt, Visitor Services Manager at World Dairy Expo. Phone: 608-224-6455 or 1-800-284-1361. Fax: 608-224-0300.

American Guernsey Association Sets Goals, Presents Awards

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

Lancaster Farming Staff
HUNT VALLEY, Md. — The American Guernsey Association held its annual national convention last week at the Marriott Hunt Valley Inn, in Hunt Valley, Md., honoring achievements of its members, electing officers, and electing promotional royalty.

While a report of the AGA election of officers, resolutions approved during the business meeting, and the national sale results were reported last week, additional awards honors and leadership messages are included this week.

Neil Jensen, AGA executive secretary reported that the past year has been volatile for the entire dairy industry, for individual farmers because of regional and local weather extremes, and for the Guernsey industry as a result.

However, he said there have been some upsides to the recent events, such as decreased milk production, high grain prices and low slaughter prices.

"Farmers are getting more for their milk. Multiple component pricing is available in 30 of 38 federal orders, which according to Dairy Profit Weekly is 79 percent of all producers," Jensen said.

"With potential butter shortages on the horizon, multiple component pricing and lower production, there is no doubt that we can expect higher milk prices the whole year."

As far as the AGA membership is concerned, Jensen said that they have also faced their ups and downs.

"One of our main objectives for improvement by the AGA has been to improve our financial stability," he said. "We have taken the first step by having a positive cash flow for the second consecutive year."

He challenged membership to not accept this as enough of an accomplishment.

"The AGA must take the next step towards a positive net income and it needs to happen now. I challenge the board of directors to provide us with decisions to make this happen. I also challenge the members to support their actions."

Among other issues, Jensen said Guernsey breeders should strive to reduce the culling of Guernseys which has averaged 40 percent, the highest among all dairy breeds, and to reduce the age of first lactation, which is now 3 years, 10 months.

He said that breeders who don't have the time or desire to make every breeding count should contact the association about mating programs available.

Cline Brubaker, president of the association, thanked board members for their loyalty and dedication, as well as the association staff, and the members for their support of the board.

He echoed sentiments of optimism on milk prices and noted that reservations have been holding steady. Brubaker also said that he felt that the association's return to emphasizing the label of "Golden Guernsey" is appropriate given the apparent trend toward recognizing the value of milk components.

"The markets for premium products are there. The time is right. Let's move forward as rapidly as possible."

Brubaker also said that the organization is considering using computers as a communication medium between Guernsey breeders.

He also announced that, while the association budget is tight, there is no planned increase in service fees.

In promotion competition, Amber Branstetter, daughter of Steve and Linda Branstetter, of Summer Shade, Kentucky, was named national Guernsey queen.

A student at the University of Kentucky studying agricultural economics, she is also vice president of her college dairy club, a member of the Block and Bridle Club, Agricultural Student Council, and the college Agribusiness Club, as well as a member of the Kentucky Junior Guernsey Cattle Club.

Current president of the Southern American Dairy Science Association-Student Affiliated Division, she works on the family farm, attending to and showing Guernseys.

AJCA, NAJ Hold Annual Meetings, Convention

PORTLAND, Oregon — The American Jersey Cattle Association and its affiliated marketing association, National All-Jersey Inc., held their respective annual meetings during a joint annual convention held June 19-23 at the Red Lion Hotel Columbia River, in Portland, Oregon.

The event marked the 128th meeting of the AJCA and the 38th annual meeting of the marketing organization.

Most of the awards presented have been previously reported.

In his report to the membership of the AJCA, Calvin Covington, executive secretary and chief executive officer, told the group that the association has been experiencing increased and continued growth in membership and in registration activity, that the breed appears to be increasing in number of animals and ownership, and that the association must continue to work to provide valuable service for its members.

According to Covington, the number of registrations for 1995 marked the second highest number in the past 29 years. He said that last year there were 63,399 animals recorded by the AJCA.

Ownership transfers last year numbered 29,346, the greatest number of transfers since 1960.

Further, in the association's performance programs, there were 69,457 cows enrolled, the greatest number ever.

The breed also climbed in average production yield, breaking 14,000 pounds of milk, 655 pounds of fat, and 525 pounds of protein.

Exporting of United States Jersey semen also has increased greatly over the past decade. In 1985, according to Covington, there were 45,161 units of Jersey semen exported. Last year there were 421,820 units exported.

Covington said that indicates growth in demand for the Jersey breed.

He said that the number of Jerseys enrolled in official Dairy Herd Improvement Association programs increased 5.46 percent, while that of all other dairy breeds in the United States decreased.

All of those increases in Jersey activity have come when the nation's number of dairy cattle has been decreasing by up to 12 percent.

He said that most of the growth in Jerseys has come from dairy farmers switching breeds, or adding the Jersey to its operation, rather than from expanding existing operations.

The AJCA also has experienced a positive balance sheet for 15 of the past 16 years, though to maintain that record requires continual attention to improving efficiencies and business.

While the breed appears to be enjoying increased popularity and demand, Covington said that work to improve the breed and to publicize the services and benefits of membership in the organization can not slip.

"If the breed and association are to keep their enviable positions ... we must continue to concentrate and improve on what got us to where we are today," he said.

Production and marketing of Jerseys have to continue to grow in order to keep the Jersey breed increasingly attractive, as well as maintaining a strong breed organization through cattle breeder and owner program participation.

As part of this effort, he said that AJCA objectives include expanding the association's on-line computer services, and having a goal of getting classifiers to use handheld, computerized data collectors to speed efficiencies and reduce human judgement variability.

Covington is also executive secretary and CEO of the National All-Jersey Inc., the marketing organization of the breed association.

In his address to the 38th annual meeting of the NAJ Inc., Covington discussed the changes in milk marketing during the past 20 years, to where about 80 percent of the total United States' dairy production is eligible to receive pricing reflecting multiple component pricing (MCP).

He said that, were it not for the implementation of the NAJ Inc. Equity Program, and the efforts to change the pricing to farmers for milk based on the component value, then Jersey dairy farms would not be receiving the premiums for protein for cheese yield that many Jersey producers have been enjoying.

He said the funds raised through the Equity Program have helped greatly in influencing the market and governing policies to reflect the value of the protein component in milk. He said about 77.5 percent of the pricing plans used that are eligible to price based on components use protein.

According to Covington, evidence of the success of the Equity

Program to influence United States dairy policy was reflected during a relatively recent western dairy conference, a representative of the National Milk Producers Federation commented on the amount of influence Jersey producers had in developing the dairy title of the current federal farm bill.

And while he said the organization has a commitment to continue that effort as the dairy title of the farm bill is implemented and the 33 federal milk marketing orders are reduced to no more than 13, he said it was unfortunate that the California milk component standards were not adopted for national use "... thanks to the grocery chain stores who have their own processing plants and CBS news anchor Dan Rather ..."

"It is amazing to me how Congress can say that higher standards are good for one state, but not the other 49."

Covington also praised the efforts of the Jersey Marketing Service, that part of the NAJ Inc. that works to market Jersey cattle.

He said the organization marketed a record number of cattle last year, handling 18 dispersal and herd reduction sales, and privately marketing cattle for more than 200 people.

Covington said the group has been receiving increasing popularity and a reputation for customer satisfaction.

In other action, Richard Clauss, president of the AJCA, briefly addressed the membership at the convention, reviewing his personal history of involvement with the breed and how positive changes implemented by the AJCA former leadership attracted him to become involved in the association.

He said that some of the advantages to dairying with Jerseys are strong and need to be communicated to more people in the dairy industry. The more the benefits of the breed are understood, the greater the demand for the breed, he said.

Ted Luther, president of the NAJ Inc., reported that the past year has been successful for the organization in enhancing the value of Jersey milk and cattle.

In a presentation that more or less mirrored the content of what Covington presented, Luther cited the marketing of 6,000 head of cattle by Jersey Marketing Service last year, and the improved marketing environment that favors the benefits of producing with Jersey cattle.

In other business, the AJCA presented its distinguished service award to Max Gordon, of Winchester, Indiana and its master breeders award to Elmer Larson, of Roy, Washington.

Recipients of the Young Jersey Breeder award were Greg and Jodi Chamberlain, of Wyoming, New York; Jeff Cochran, of Coquille, Oregon; Edward Jr. and Taryn Cooper, of Middleburgh, New York; Garry Hansen and Christi Hendrickson-Hansen, of Canby, Oregon; Peter and Linda Hawkes, of Mendon, Mass.; Russell and Cheryl King, of Creston, Ohio; and Kevin Lutz, of Lincolnton, North Carolina.

The president's trophy, representing the highest individual 305-day record for production of milk was presented to George and Raycene Crews, of Star, Idaho, for their Lanis Lexi Of Star Jersey with 33,900 pounds of milk, 1,540 pounds of fat, and 1,465 pounds of protein on a mature equivalent basis.

The Osgton Farm Trophy, recognizing lifetime milk production by a living animal, went to Peggy Bennett, of Albion, N.Y., for her Maplerow Mercury Aron, with 247,820 pounds of milk, 11,346 pounds fat, and 8,670 pounds of protein produced in 4,188 days.

The High Lawn Farm trophy was also present to Bennett for the production of her Aron cow.

The Edyvean Farm trophy was presented to Glen Meadows Farm, in Fultonville, N.Y., for the protein production of their Glen Meadows Maple Sweetness, with 9,103 pounds protein, 232,010 pounds milk, and 10,474 pounds fat produced in 4,268 days.

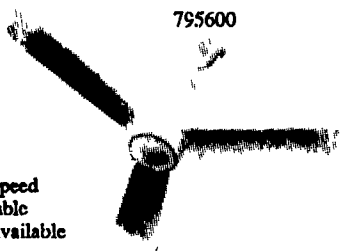

The Hilmar Cheese Yield trophy was presented to George and Raycene Crews for the production of their Lanis Lexi of Star Jersey cow.

Threshing Festival, Conservation Expo Combine To Display Heritage Of Farming

ANDY ANDREWS

Lancaster Farming Staff

CHURCHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — At last year's Shirktown Threshing Festival, program coordinator and conservation farmer Bob Shirk overheard two "old-time" farmers talk about antique equipment.

Shirk recalled one of them saying, "Boy, I remember I used to get so mad at that thing. I used to have one of them. I junked it."

Another said, "I put it on the fencerow. It looked pretty good sitting there."

According to Shirk, host to this year's Lancaster County Conservation Expo, hearing the stories about old-time equipment, whether they're about old balers or threshing equipment, adds a bit of story. Reminiscing about how the old equipment used to work brings back memories of "dust, dirt, smoke . . . and friends," he said.

That heritage — how the old engineers put together some reliable equipment to get the job done — is somehow being lost to younger farmers. Where once fields were cut by hand, now big bulky combines fill the landscape. Gone are the simple baling apparatus, replaced by multi-thousand dollar pieces of equipment.

And many of today's young farmers have no idea how farm technology progressed to the point where the big, expensive machines became the norm.

Many don't understand the heritage of learning to make do with what equipment you had or learn to retrofit it to get the job done at least cost.

Along the way, they may even have lost track of some of the reasoning behind land conservation practices and how machine technology has adapted.

For that reason, the annual Lancaster Conservation Exposition will be held during the annual Shirktown Threshing Festival on Shirktown Road south of Churchtown on Saturday, August 3, in conjunction with the local Churchtown Days.

Shirk, a 6th generation farmer who grew up on the farm, manages about 63 acres and raises a few head of steers. He is owner of a 200-year-old Bicentennial Farm that traces back to 1792, when Joseph Shirk purchased the original 200 acres. In the years since, the farm was subdivided and sold to different Shirk family members.

At that time, according to Shirk, it was a "typical 18th Century farm" complete with a tannery business, smokestack and all. Many people were employed from the area.

Since then, the entire farm economic landscape changed and tanneries went out of business. They were replaced by all types of ag industry and home-related businesses.

In all, the farm includes about 48 tillable acres, of which 38 are devoted to corn, five to hay, and five to rye.

At one time, Shirk finished about 25-30 head of steer, raised hogs, and farmed tobacco. Now Shirk only finishes a few head of steers, grows no tobacco, and has to supplement his income by working part-time in maintenance at the Maple Grove Raceway.

Shirk, who recently became a Lancaster County Conservation District cooperator, has begun to install terracing and has in place diversions and grass waterways to conserve the soil, a Chester silt loam. The sandstone type of ground can be easily erodible if not protected.

Shirk said, "My dad, David Shirk, would never have thought of anything like this, as far as contours or anything like that. He was a good farmer, but back then all they wanted to do was tear out fencerows and make it easier to farm."

Shirk learned of his dad's heritage in farming — including using horses and Allis-Chalmers Bs. The intent years ago was to get rid of tree stumps, rocks, and fencerows. However, by making it easier to farm, "we also lost some game habitat and some soil by tearing out the fencerows."

Changes in the economy made it imperative for farmers to adapt greater portions of land to crops or converted to products that could be sold. Corn was grown in bigger proportions — which at planting leaves soil bare.

At one time, nearly all the land was plowed up for corn, which worried Shirk. From that moment, Shirk started to ensure that soil of farming. For that reason — wouldn't be lost downstream by combined with a keen interest in installing strips, a practice the conservation farmer still employs.

To Shirk, it's important that the younger generations of farmers learn and understand the heritage of farming. For that reason — old equipment — he helped start the annual Shirktown Threshing Festival.

The idea for the threshing festival came about when, about 10 years ago, a friend of Shirk's donated an Ellis Keystone Champion thresher, patented in 1895 and manufactured in Pottstown, to the Shirk farm. Shirk thought, what good's a threshing machine if you're not going to thresh? So a few friends got together and, after hand cradling some rye, decided to use the old thresher and see what could be done.

"So that's what started this mess," said Shirk, smiling. He admitted he was glad they convinced him to host the threshing event, held at the farm the first Saturday in August and open free to the public.

Since 1992, the bicentennial year for the farm, Shirk has been posting the sign, "Threshing Today," during the festival on his farm.

Shirk said that while he never worked with his grandfather, Peter Shirk, "threshing . . . and eating dust," he fondly remembers how farmers used the old equipment and depended on it for their livelihood.

"My grandfather had two threshing rigs," said Shirk, including two Frick steam traction engines, two Frick threshing machines, and two Ohio balers — "which I vaguely remember." In later years, Peter Shirk used a Minneapolis Moline tractor to do various tasks.

"This stuff has got roots here," said Shirk.

But some of the younger generation doesn't even know what the old equipment was all about.

"These kids just don't know about this stuff and, really, we're rich in it here," he said. "I mean, we have a lot of that machinery in the area that is still in use."

One day, an Amish man about 20 years of age came over and looked at Shirk's old hay loader. "This guy came walking up here, he's 20 some years old, and he said, 'What's that?' I mean, he was born and raised on one of the other farms down here, and he had no idea what that hay loader did, you know. So I said, 'Well, maybe somebody just by chance might learn something.'"

As a result, the threshing festival, to which more than 300 visit every year, has been a success.

Open free of charge, the festival includes lots of other equipment owned by Shirk and others. A short list includes a Hench Drumgold one-row horse corn planter, manufactured in York; an Ellis Champion thresher, circa 1900, belt driven, made in Pottstown; New Idea manure spreader; lots of horsedrawn tillage equipment; a mini baler; and lots of old, fascinating devices used on the farms at the turn of the century.

At the festival there will be food for sale from a local church group. There is no charge for admission.

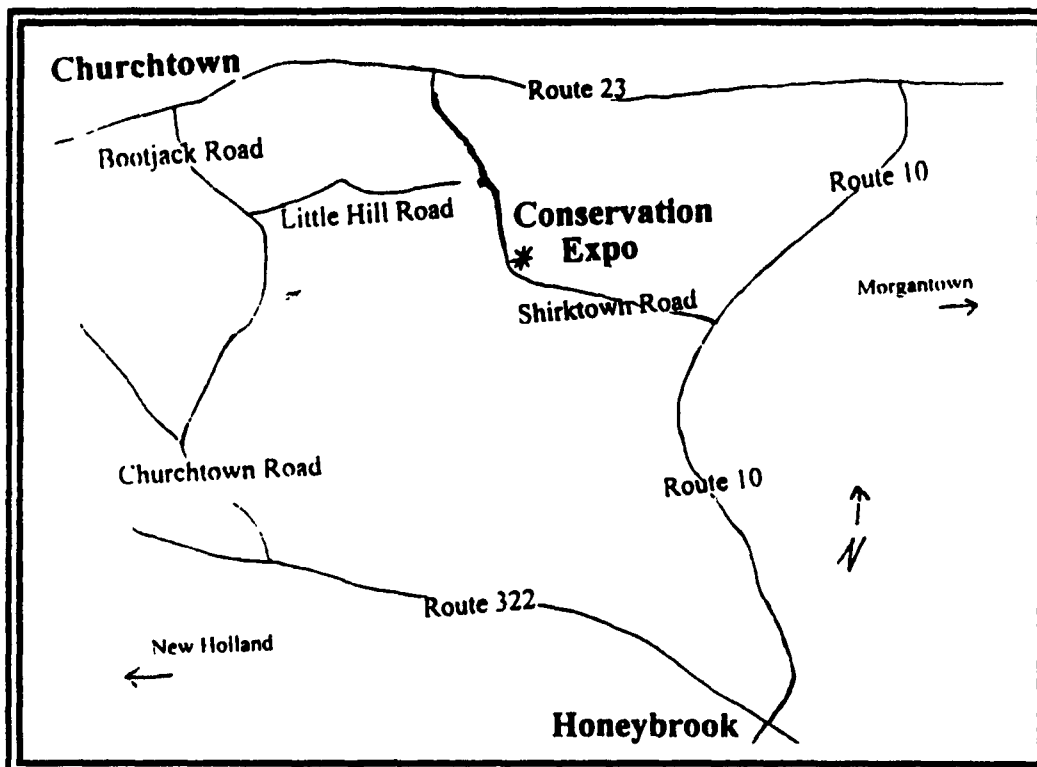

Shirk said he makes no money on the event — it actually costs him. But he views it as a way to educate the younger farmers about the way people farmed long ago.

"If you start looking at this machinery, all this is a lot of improvement on what we already had," he said. "Those old machines were pretty good."

According to Travis Martin, conservation technician and Expo chairman, the threshing festival shows all the improvements made to modern farming practices over the years "step by step." Also, in conjunction with Churchtown Days, there will be flea markets, fire hall barbecues, church breakfasts, and all sorts of different events, making it a town "get together."

Importantly, the Expo will feature "things that people can do on their own and just show what to look for" to help them begin conservation practices. Included will be a tour of the newly implemented conservation practices in addition to natural lawn care, management of septic systems, and home energy efficiency.

"Water and soil are the things everyone has responsibilities for, because everyone depends on them" said Martin. "The homeowner, the farmer, the businessman — they all deal with these responsibilities."

Also at the event, a real estate planner will be available to answer questions.

The "heritage" event will show "what farming was and what farming is," said Martin.

"This is a bicentennial farm," he said. "This is our heritage. Lancaster County has been a farm community. We've gone through a lot of innovations. And a lot of the country looks to Lancaster County as a leader in both agriculture and conservation."

In the coming years for the festival, Shirk has no plans to expand it, advertise it in a big way, or charge people admission.

"I want to keep it simple," he said. "We're having fun at this point. To me, that's important. It's not a big, ugly business."

For now, Shirk wants to keep the threshing event small and invite those who are farm-oriented.

"So we have a pretty close tie to this Conservation Expo," he said.

Farm Bureau Foundation Presents $26,000 Check

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's (PFB) Pennsylvania Friends of Agriculture Foundation has presented a check for $26,500 to the Agriculture Awareness Foundation to sponsor 53 teachers at this summer's Ag in the Classroom workshop.

PFB is a voluntary, statewide organization which represents 26,458 member families in 54 county units.

"The check was presented on behalf of the 35 county farm bureaus and other PFB groups who contributed money for this important program," said PFB president Guy Donaldson. Sponsoring counties contributed a $500 "scholarship" per teacher to enroll elementary school teachers in the five-day workshop. The Friends of Agriculture collected and coordinated the counties' fundraising efforts.

The Agricultural Awareness Foundation sponsors the workshop held annually at Penn State's University Park campus. This year's workshop will take place July 21-26. "Teachers will learn about all aspects of the agricultural industry, tour farms, and meet real farmers," said Donaldson. "They'll return home inspired to teach their students about agriculture with lots of hands-on material they can use in their classrooms."

"We're grateful for the contribution," said Carl Shaffer, president of the Agricultural Awareness Foundation, in accepting the check. "We're indebted to the participating county farm bureaus for all their hard work and grass roots support of the program. We appreciate the fact that Ag in the Classroom is recognized by county farm leaders as a valuable tool for educating consumers about the importance of agriculture. County farm bureau support has been a vital force in the success of this program."

An outstanding example of that support is the Lehigh County Farm Bureau Women's Committee which is the largest single Farm Bureau sponsor of Ag in the Classroom teachers. This year the women are sending five teachers to Penn State for the workshops. Funding was raised through a poinsettia sale at Christmas and activities at the annual Mini Farm Show in March which the Women's Committee sponsors at the Trexlertown Mall. Committee chairman Nancy Semmel and member Annette Pattishall represented the Lehigh's Women's Committee at the check presentation in Harrisburg. The committee's Ag in the Classroom coordinator Frances Smith was unable to attend.

So far, 307 kindergarten and elementary school teachers have "graduated" from the first four annual Ag in the Classroom workshops. A total of 106 teachers are enrolled for this summer's session. Pat Sueck, executive director of the Agriculture Awareness Foundation, estimates that Ag in the Classroom program has reached 46,200 people since it began, including teachers, their students over the years and various conferences and public relations activities. "But numbers don't tell the whole story," she said. For example, she's been getting feedback that a lot of students who had classes with Ag in the Classroom teachers are now enrolling in their school's vo-ag courses. The impact of Ag in the Classroom teaching is so far reaching that it can't really be measured, she said.

Farm Bureau has been supporting the program since the beginning. County farm bureaus sponsoring Ag in the Classroom teach-

This station is complemented by one at the Kutztown Produce Auction, one at the Wessner farm in Lehigh County, and the Schuylkill County station at Ringtown, according to Dr. Alan MacNab, professor of plant pathology at Penn State.

At Penn State, weather information is collected, recorded, and analyzed. A computer program is used to assemble plant disease forecasts, particularly for late blight and early blight on tomatoes and potatoes.

As a result, specialists and educators can then provide spraying interval information to growers.

"Every noon of every day we access data from the units by phone line or cellular phone service," said MacNab.

Penn State developed two programs — BLITECAST and FAST — for forecasting, according to MacNab. BLITECAST measures the potential for late blight development on potatoes and tomatoes. FAST, an acronym for Forecast of Alternaria Solani on Tomatoes (Alternaria Solani is a fungus that causes early blight), measures when conditions are favorable for development of the disease.

The past several years, to make the forecasts, Penn State has had to rely on information from the weather station in Schuylkill County. Penn State believed that a station closer to many of the growers was needed in southeast Pennsylvania.

"Late blight is a very scary disease," said MacNab. "It can wipe out potato or tomato plantings in a couple of weeks without any fungicide applications."

"In the past, Lancaster County hasn't experienced a lot of late blight problems," said Jeff Stoltzfus, Eastern Lancaster County Young Farmers Program instructor. "But we're trying to stop any future infestation."

Stoltzfus posts a spray forecast on the bulletin board in the office at the produce auction.

According to Stoltzfus, information for disease forecasting is assembled using the station at the auction. During the week, a forecast fax is sent from Penn State to Stoltzfus, and he posts a spraying schedule at the auction.

"There have been two benefits for growers in using this forecast," said Stoltzfus. "One, in some years, it helps growers to use fewer sprays when conditions show no blight presence. And two, in bad years, it helps to save the crops affected by blight. For both kinds of years it will help us out."

Late blight can be particularly devastating to potato and tomato growers. So far, conditions haven't been favorable for blight to develop because of the hot, although humid, conditions. Blight appears when conditions are mostly cool and wet.

Stoltzfus said that since late blight has been detected in Erie County, growers should watch the forecasts to stem its appearance in the southeast portions of the state.

Early blight, however, has been a concern, because it is more "moisture sensitive," according to Stoltzfus. Spraying intervals are posted for crop conditions at the Leola Produce Auction.

Here and there, according to Stoltzfus, early blight has shown up on tomato plant leaves. Early blight can turn into mostly a late-season headache for growers as it slowly withers the crops away. The blight condition manifests itself in dark, concentric rings from a dark brown lesion on the leaf surface. It gradually affects the entire plant.

Growers who are interested in learning more about the station can see it during a special open house and field day on Tuesday, July 16, from 6:30 p.m.-8:30 p.m. at the auction. MacNab will also be at the open house to answer questions.

To obtain a disease forecast made by MacNab, growers can call a toll-free number, the Penn State IPM Hotline, at (800) PENN-IPM. For information on the open house, contact Jeff Stoltzfus at (717) 354-1522 or Tim Elkner at Penn State Extension, (717) 394-6851.

It's called AgrAbility, and Pennsylvania has it.

It can offer a wealth of knowledge and understanding.

He can speak to anybody, anywhere, over the phone about his own injury. Twenty-one years ago, Moyer had to have his left leg amputated after it was caught in a forage harvester. He can also visit anyone within a 70-mile radius and offer advice about what he did to maintain his living as a farmer and learn to live with his disability.

For people who are fitted with a prosthetic, like he was to replace the missing leg, many don't really

Moyer has traveled thousands of miles and attended what he estimates are hundreds of meetings held by extension and other agencies through the years, speaking about his disability and how the Schaufler, who spoke with Lancaster Farming by phone recently, provided advice to a Meadville dairy farmer who recently underwent knee replacement surgery. Schaufler gave information to the farmer about where to get help in getting a tractor lift and a lift in the milking parlor. The farmer battled arthritis in both knees for quite some time.

According to Penn State statistics, about 250 Pennsylvanians are affected by disability through farm injury. Some of the ways assistive technology has helped, according to information provided by Schaufler, includes:

- Use of a feed cart instead of a wheelbarrow for a farmer with an upper arm amputation. The feed cart is easier to handle with one hand.

- Replacing an old tractor seat with a suspension seat allows longer fieldwork times for those with back or neck pain. Simply placing wide-angle viewing mirrors and adding a swivel base to a tractor seat allows looking at rear-mounted equipment without as much twisting of the neck and back.

- Enlarging ignition or other keys with epoxy putty or other material makes it much easier to grip and turn the key. This is handy for people with finger amputations or arthritis.

All of these ideas — and more — have been used in Pennsylvania during the past year, according to Schaufler.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

"How's your garden doing?"

That's a question that frequently comes in for discussion with family and close friends. Non-gardeners probably find this issue as boring and irrelevant a topic as you could pick for conversation. But for those of us diehard dirt lovers, the state of our plants is almost as fascinating as bragging about our kids and grandkids.

"How's your garden doing?" is a question that inevitably arises in phone and personal visits with Mom, whose love of plants and growing things surely started me off in that same direction.

It's a question that often arises in those weekend, coast-to-coast conversations with one offspring as well as more frequent cultivation comparisons with the others in the farmhouse almost next door.

And it's a question shared between a close friend several counties away as we mull over the state of our tomatoes, debate bean germination — or lack of it — and compare the progress of giant pumpkins we are cultivating from the same, long-distance-shared pack of seeds.

"How's your garden doing?"

That's not a question you would expect from your average 5-year-old.

Which is why I was so awestruck one recent evening, when friends stopped by at dusk with their two young sons and brand-new baby daughter. After visiting the ponds to check on the fish and the geese, their oldest, age five, turned to me and matter-of-factly asked, "How's your garden doing?"

Delighted at his interest, I confided to Brent that I had just found the first tiny watermelons and cantaloupes on the vines. But we didn't "go look" as he requested, due to the encroaching darkness and his hungry, newborn sister.

Since Brent was about two, his parents have dropped by on occasion usually on farming business and usually late on a summer evening. That's generally when I'm puttering around in the garden. So Brent has hauled home some of the garden's inevitable excesses of things such as zucchini, which he promised to taste (in keeping with my philosophy to grab an opportunity that presents itself to persuade a kid to try a vegetable). Last summer, we planted gladioli corms together for a little while one evening. He then took some of my overabundance of the flower bulbs along home to plant.

Kids and gardens are naturals together. Where else can you play in the dirt, pour water on stuff, and generally mess around doing things your mom would frown on having done in the house? Like pitching away rotten tomatoes or catching bugs. And be praised for it, for goodness sake.

Shortly before our grandson's first birthday a few weeks ago, our West Coast daughter related that he had abandoned the measuring cups she took along outside for him to play with while she planted blueberry bushes. Typical toddler, he instead swiped — and threw a fit to keep — her garden trowel. Leaving her to fill in the holes around the blueberries with . . . a measuring cup.

Thus, a subsequent birthday package from Grandma and Grandpa included a cheap, rounded-end, lightweight gardening trowel for this budding horticulturist. Grandmotherly nudging toward another generation of dirt lovers, maybe?

Last I heard, he was trying to dig holes with it — in their furniture.

Hey, you can plant a seed. You don't have much influence on how it will grow.

WILL THE IRS INHERIT YOUR ESTATE?

We can help you plan for the future.

New York Life's Survivorship Whole Life policy was created to provide you and your spouse with life insurance coverage, and needed liquidity, when your estate taxes are due.

It works like this: When one spouse dies, the resulting estate tax can be deferred until after the death of the surviving spouse. At that time, the policy's proceeds become available, and can be used to help pay the usually heavy estate tax. In other words, New York Life makes the proceeds available when they're needed the most.

You've worked hard all of your life, and shouldn't have to spend time worrying about what will happen to your estate. Call us for all the details and let us show you why New York Life is The Company You Keep.

All Good Things Found In Ice Cream

For a sweet summer indulgence, delight "kids" ages 8 to 80 with homemade ice cream. No one will refuse a chance at the churn in order to reap the scrumptious rewards.

That's why making ice cream tends to turn into a family activity. Whether using Grandfather's churn with rock salt and ice or one of the newer machines that uses no ice at all, young and old alike will gather to lend a helping hand—and spoon!

Because every ice cream maker is different, get acquainted with your machine before you begin. Read the owner's manual thoroughly and follow the manufacturer's instructions for freezing. The basic procedure is simple—even for a first-timer—and these helpful tips ensure success...

- As with all good things, the better the ingredients, the better the results. Use fruit at the peak of ripeness, pure not imitation flavor extracts, fresh eggs and REAL dairy products. Chill cooked ice cream mixtures completely before freezing.

- Ice cream expands as it freezes, so don't overfill the ice cream maker. Most should be filled to only two-thirds or three-fourths of their capacity—check your manufacturer's instructions.

- Homemade ice creams are made without preservatives and stabilizers, so they don't keep as long as commercial varieties. For optimum flavor and texture, eat homemade ice cream within one or two weeks.

Tips for cooking a Custard Base

- Stir milk, sugar and eggs constantly while cooking over low heat until the mixture thickens and reaches 160 degrees.

- If you don't have a thermometer, use the "Spoon test" to determine temperature. At 160 degrees, the mixture will lightly coat a metal spoon.

- Remove custard from the heat before adding other ingredients.

- Chill the custard base completely before freezing in your ice cream maker.

It's also easy to convert your favorite recipes that call for uncooked eggs. Simply combine the milk, beaten eggs and sugar in a saucepan, then cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens and coats a metal spoon (160 degrees).

After making your own ice cream, you'll agree—the simple preparation results in a delicious "scoop" that's worth the wait!

FOUND: A MAGIC HEALTH LIQUID

Today many people are looking around to find something to take instead of the daily dreary vitamin pill. I discovered a liquid product that has all the known essentials for good health plus a few extras.

After making sure it had the regular vitamins A, B, C, D, and E, I checked out the others fairly well-known ones: riboflavin, niacin, pyridoxine, pantothenic acid, and folic acid. It had them too.

Then I turned to the minerals. I found the drink had every single mineral found in the human body. These include phosphorus, potassium, magnesium, chloride, calcium, sodium, and iron.

I found we need 19 minerals. This drink has them all plus 10 more.

I thought about the protein. The pill peddlers have been making a big fuss about a protein pill lately. Perhaps this fluid had no protein.

There are 10 different proteins and amino acids that we need for good health. I found this drink had them all plus another 8.

But just to be sure, I called a doctor and asked his opinion of the product. He told me, "It favors growth and development in the young and confers health and vigor throughout life and postpones old age."

I tried a dietitian and he had only praise for this fluid. I got similar answers from a dentist, a nurse, and a nutritional scientist.

They all agreed it was the most convenient, pleasant, and effective way to fill the nutritional gap of ordinary diets and produce growth, health, and energy.

Then I thought this stuff must surely be expensive and scarce, but in checking up, I found that most farm families have all they want to use right on the farm. It is not expensive to buy. It is called "Milk."

Getting Kids To Help Around The House

Since children, at least most children, aren't born with a natural love for taking out the trash or cleaning up after themselves, teaching them to appreciate home maintenance can be a real challenge. As one father stated, "Mowing the lawn, clearing the table, children love to help — until they are able!"

As with any parenting issue, we need to look at ourselves and see what example we are setting. If we don't take care of our space and belongings, chances are our children will imitate us. Sorry to say that the opposite doesn't always work. You may be very organized and still not have neat children!

Another aspect to consider is whether you have realistic expectations. Take into consideration the child's age and developmental skills. Are you expecting too much or too little from your child? If perfection is the goal on your part, there's no way your child can measure up. On the other hand, if you don't expect enough from your child, she may not even try because it doesn't matter anyway.

There are some basic truths about chores.

1. Children can begin to help with chores as early as age two!
2. Parental guidance is required.
3. You need to adjust your expectations and goals to the age of your child.
4. Every child can be taught responsibility!

Certainly part of getting your children to help around the house is knowing the right chores. Following is an age appropriate guide.

Age 2 — As toddlers test their independence, it's an ideal time to allow them to be little family helpers. They can:

- Hand the grocery clerk something from the cart;
- Ring a doorbell;
- Help put toys away.

Age 3 — Curiosity and verbal development mark this age as a good time to encourage helping through play. They can:

- Find all the stuffed animals in the playroom;
- Put books in a pile;
- Help bag fruit at the store;
- Put scraps in the trash;
- Get dressed, put away night clothes;
- Brush hair;
- Make bed (with help);
- Fold clothes (small items:

handkerchiefs, washcloths);

- Empty dishwasher (with help);
 - Clear meal dishes;
 - Empty wastebaskets;
 - Pick up toys before bed.
- Ages 4 to 6 — Kids this age still have very short attention spans, so chores should be simple, concrete, and one-step. Some examples of what children this age can do:
- Drop clothes in the hamper;
 - Flush the toilet;
 - Answer the phone (but not take messages);
 - Turn off the TV;
 - Arrange stuffed animals on their bed;
 - Begin to count out silverware, etc. for meals, and help set the table;
 - Set table;
 - Clean bathroom sinks;
 - Help clean and straighten closets and drawers;
 - Clean up after pet; feed pet;
 - Dust furniture in a room or two;
 - Vacuum room;
 - Help put groceries away.

Ages 6 to 8 — Children this age still need supervision, but do encourage their sense of capability as you work together. Try having them:

- Make a bed;
- Wipe up spills;
- Care for pets;
- Hang up clean clothes;
- Pick up belongings;
- Set the table;
- Empty garbage;
- Sweep walks;
- Help in kitchen after dinner;
- Help make lunch for school;
- Clean out car.

Ages 8 to 10 — Once reminded, older kids can take responsibility for performing tasks. They can:

- Clean their room;
- Help with laundry;

- Take out the trash;
- Load/unload dishwasher;
- Fix a snack;
- Collect library books;
- Clean bathroom mirrors;
- Wash windows;
- Wash floors with small areas (bathrooms);
- Polish shoes;
- Put away linens.

Additional responsibilities can be added as they mature and grow: wash car, make dessert, ironing, mow lawn, clean refrigerator, yard work, fix an entire meal, grocery shop, laundry, repot plants, care for younger children.

Keep in mind the former is a "guide." Your child may be more capable on some things than others and may already be doing things not on the list. What's important is that they are helping. Not only does this teach them responsibility and eventually make life easier for you, it's important to your child. We all need to feel as though we belong and are needed. By giving our children chores, we are also telling them they are an important part of the family and we appreciate their contributions to making our home run smoothly!

You may be saying you agree doing chores builds character and that you have been assigning appropriate tasks, but how do you actually get them to do it? Well, I know of no child who jumps for joy when given chores so first off don't expect it. But in addition:

- Give a choice — especially as children get older, they may want more of a say in when something gets done. They want some choice and respect. I set a deadline like chores have to be done before TV or ball games, etc. They have a deadline, but they can make the choice of when to do it!

• Make a chore chart or list. I have found recently that just listing the children's chores on the family schedule pasted on the fridge is not as effective as making a daily list that they can scratch off their tasks once completed. This gives them a sense of accomplishment, plus I can also check to see what's completed without nagging.

• Thank children and praise them for doing their tasks. This is especially important as they are learning a new skill. Focus on what they are doing right and teach them constructively where they need to improve. I personally don't believe children should get paid to do their chores. I believe that's part of learning responsibility and contributing to the family well-being. A question to ask yourself is what are they learning by getting paid or rewarded?

• If you're embarking on a major clean-up day. List all the tasks that need to be accomplished and let the children have a choice in what they want and are able to lend a hand. When you work along side your child there's so much more happening than just getting the job done. Recently my 13-year-old son was helping me weed a flower bed. The weeding got done, and we had a great time just talking!

In closing, let me reiterate that all children can be and need to be taught responsibility. We as parents need to be responsible as well as we guide them through this process. If all children were taught responsibility with positive guidance from their parents — think what a difference our world would be. Indeed it all starts at home.

QUESTION — A "faithful reader" has been looking for recipes for making scones. It's a dough, rolled into a circle and cut in wedges and baked on a cookie sheet. Also, what is the origin of the name?

QUESTION — Yvonne Musser, Lancaster, said she would like a recipe for buttermilk salad like they serve at Akron Restaurant in Akron. This torte has a graham cracker crust, then a rhubarb layer, and a cream cheese marshmallow topping.

QUESTION — Joanne Stauffer, Myerstown, would like a recipe for jelly made with little or no sugar.

QUESTION — Dixie Fix, Harrisonville, would like some recipes using stuffing tomatoes. She planted seed from Gurney's. All they had was yellow seed. Does anyone know if seeds are available for green stuffing tomatoes or if they can be stuffed like peppers and frozen?

QUESTION — A reader would like to have recipes for hash browns, and fruit cocktail jam that has vanilla instant pudding and orange Jell-O as an ingredient.

QUESTION — A reader would like a recipe for chocolate pizza made in a pizza pan.

QUESTION — Alta Sensenig, Newville, would like to have a recipe for butter and egg dinner rolls, which are really moist.

QUESTION — Melva Baumer, Millmont, wants ideas for main course dishes that can be hauled to the field to be served to hired help.

QUESTION — Christine Ayers of Clarks Summit would like a recipe for apple cider doughnuts and cabbage salad that tastes like that made at the Country Cupboard Restaurant in Lewisburg.

QUESTION — Deanna Cunfer, Lehigh, would like recipes for broiled scallops. She writes that when she makes them at home they lack that special something that makes them so tasty at good restaurants.

QUESTION — D. Newsom, N.Y., would like a recipe that tastes similar to Mrs. Smith's French Apple Pie made with raisins and confectioners' icing on top.

QUESTION — A faithful New York reader would like a recipe for an old-fashioned strawberry shortcake with a cooked frosting. Also, a recipe for quick cinnamon sticky buns and quick cinnamon swirl bread made without yeast.

QUESTION — Linda Ludwig, Reading, would like recipes for blueberry and cinnamon raisin bagels, and an apple tart with syrup topping like those sold by Ruppert's Bakery at the Leesport Auction years ago.

ANSWER — Lynda Lamp, Baltimore, Md., wanted a recipe that her mother's friend used to make about 20 years ago called Triple Chocolate Cake. She remembers that it was made with a chocolate cake mix, chocolate pudding, and chocolate chips. Instead of icing, the top was dusted with confectioners' sugar. Thanks to those who sent recipes, including Helen Refi; Rita Ocker, Shippensburg; Lydia Kurtz, Ephrata; Verna Moll, Temple; Susan Hague, East Brunswick, N.J.; Linda Stoltzfus, Leola.

TRIPLE CHOCOLATE CAKE

1 box chocolate cake mix
4-ounce package instant chocolate pudding
12 ounce bag chocolate chips
1½ cup water
2 eggs
¼ cup vegetable oil

Mix all ingredients together. Bake in ungreased bundt pan for 40 minutes at 350 degrees. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar after it has cooled.

ANSWER — Annie Stauffer, Louisville, Md., sent in this recipe for the request for rivvel soup.

RIVVEL SOUP

Heat 2 quarts of milk to boiling point. Meanwhile, mix 1½ cup regular flour and 1 small egg. With fork or mixing spoon, toss and cut this into fine rivvels. A wire whisk can be used. When milk boils, scatter the rivvels in by handfuls, stirring steadily. Add 1½ teaspoon salt, bring to a steady boil. Do not let scorch. (Use a pancake turner to scrape the bottom while boiling). Boil only a few minutes. Serve with crackers and fine chopped onions, if desired.

ANSWER — Annie Stauffer shares this recipe for the whole family at summer picnic time:

EASY CAKES

2 cups leftover cooked rice
2 cups biscuit mix
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
2 large eggs, beat in a cup with fork
½ cup evaporated milk (whole milk would do)
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine dry ingredients in a big bowl. Make a well in the middle. Add eggs, milk, and vanilla; stir well. Chill 1 hour.

Put 2 inches of vegetable oil in dutch oven and heat to 400 degrees. Carefully drop batter by tablespoonfuls into hot oil, several at a time. Turn till golden, turn once every three to five minutes. Drain on paper towels.

Glaze:

1 cup confectioners' sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 to 2 tablespoons water

Dribble over hot cakes. Serve warm. Makes about four dozen.

Roses Bloom At Hershey Gardens

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — The 8,000 roses that call Hershey Gardens home will make their first entrance of the season in early June, and will continue blooming through late September. The 450 different varieties include climbing, tea, grandiflora, floribunda, miniatures and old garden roses.

The original gardens started by Milton S. Hershey, consisted of a three and one-half acre plot of roses directly across from Hotel Hershey. Today the gardens include 23 acres of seasonal flowering displays, themed garden areas, specimen trees and shrubs, and of course, our award-winning rose display.

The gardens has again been presented with the All-America Rose Selections Award for Outstanding Maintenance. This honor is bestowed annually to gardens which surpass AARS's high standards for rose care and presentation. AARS public gardens contain a minimum of 800 rose bushes, and offer special displays of outstanding new varieties chosen by AARS for their beauty, novelty and vigor. Starting each June, the gardens offer an exclusive preview of the coming year's outstanding new varieties. There are currently 139 AARS public gardens throughout the United States.

In addition to the roses, visitors to the Gardens will be able enjoy the bloom of azaleas, rhododendrons and peonies throughout the month of June.

Hershey Gardens is open daily through October 31, 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Admission rates are $4.25 Adults (16-61); Seniors $3.75 (62 & up); and $2 Youth (3-15). Members and children 2 and under are free. Family, group and AAA discounts are available. For further informa-

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Sometimes there are so many big jobs to get done that we neglect the small jobs. But eventually we get around to doing the little things. A rainy day is a good time to catch up on indoor chores.

We are now finished with picking sugar peas and strawberries on alternate days. Next will be the task of picking the red and black raspberries. My husband has replanted some and put support up for them and it appears that the harvest will be big. Even my yellow raspberries are loaded with fruit. At least, they are easier to pick than strawberries — we picked more than 100 quarts of them.

My flower seeds did not come up very well this year and so I replanted twice. Now I have calendulas, statice, and burnet but no strawflowers. Maybe the cosmos and zinnias will grow. Three kinds of lilies are blooming now and I'm considering ordering a half dozen new varieties.

My grandchildren and I do not agree on what to call mealtimes. At our house we eat dinner and supper. But at their house it is lunch and dinner. No matter the name, when they sit at our table, they really empty their plates. Apparently, I make different food than they get at home. The potato pancakes were gobbled up and soon the platter was empty. They think it odd that we have two desserts with each meal but they help us to eat them.

Sometimes one does a job too well. The other day I hoed the entire garden and the rows of flowers and vegetables all stood out very clearly and so the children thought the remaining plants were weeds. They pulled out all of the cantaloupes. I replanted the poor wilted things and hope for the best.

Kids Enjoy Dairy Day At York Ag Museum

JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Cows, goats and dairy foods got lots of attention when the Agricultural and Industrial Museum of York hosted its annual Dairy Day, with lots of activities especially for children.

The museum is located at 480 East Market Street, York, and has many displays about the history of agriculture and industry in York County.

While there were no live cows at the museum, members of York County's Kid-N-Around 4-H Dairy Goat club brought several goats and their kids. The goats were a special favorite with kids visiting Dairy Day and spent most of the day being hugged and petted.

There were also wooden cows to paint and take home, a blind-folded game of Pin The Tail On The Cow, and videos on cows and the dairy industry. At a "make your own sundae bar," kids had a tough time choosing which of many toppings — like peanuts, cherries and colorful sprinkles — to put on their dishes of vanilla ice cream. Milk and cookies were also available.

Some kids tried making ice cream-in-a-can. A small amount of ice cream mix is put into a small container, which is put inside a coffee can filled with ice and salt. After the can of ice and container of ice cream mix are rolled around on the floor for many minutes, the mix freezes into ice cream.

Lots of the visitors took time to make cow bells which they could wear around their necks. The bell making was part of the display of York County Dairy Princess Angela Mummert and the county's dairy promotion committee.

Make A Cow Bell

You can make a bell, too. All you need is a clear plastic drinking cup, a small round bell, a length of yarn about two feet long and a market pen.

Painting a cow was another activity offered at the Ag Museum during Dairy Days. Katie Schwartz was one of the many kids who painted one of the wooden cows.

A favorite activity at the Ag Museum's Dairy Day was Pin The Tail On The Cow. Amy Crerand, 11, dressed up in a cow costume to help supervise the game.

Punch a small hole, about 1/4 inch, with a scissors or sharp nail in the bottom of a clear plastic drinking cup (Get mom or dad to help make the hole since the plastic can be hard to punch through). Then thread one end of the yarn through the hole at the top of the round bell. From the inside of the cup, push both ends of the yarn through the hole you punched in the cup's bottom. Turn the cup upside down, pull the yarn through the hole and knot the ends. Add cow spots with a market pen and wear the cow bell around your neck.

Yogurt Cheese

You might also like to try making the Yogurt Cheese that could be sampled at the museum. Line a kitchen colander or a sieve with a layer or two of clean cheesecloth.

Empty a small container of plain, unflavored yogurt onto the cheesecloth and sit over a dish to drain. Put the draining yogurt into the refrigerator and let it set for several hours or overnight, while all the liquid drips through the cheesecloth. When the yogurt is very well drained, add a sprinkling of sugar to cut the tartness of the yogurt and a mix of your favorite herbs. They might include parsley, onion or a mix of herbs used to flavor Italian foods like spaghetti.

Lancaster Society 18

Farm Women Society 18 held its June meeting at the home of Mrs. David Buckwalter. This beautifully decorated farm home is furnished with many antiques and makes a suitable atmosphere for the nostalgic program.

Following devotions by Millie Greider, the business session was led by Roberta Shepherdson, president of the Society.

Seventeen members answered roll call by describing the flowers in their wedding bouquets. Each member brought wedding pictures and was asked to talk about her wedding, honeymoon and a few events that happened over the years.

Members became better acquainted with each other as they learned "how it all started."

No meeting is scheduled during July, a vacation month.

Berks Society 3

Berks Society 3 group had an everybody's birthday party. We celebrated by having cupcakes, ice cream, chips and pretzels. We also played a variety of games.

They also surprised our hostess, Lora Oswald, with a baby shower for her son. The next meeting is at the home of Wendy Share, Boyertown.

Berks Society 4

The June meeting of Berks County Society of Farm Women Group 4 was at the Boyertown home of Georgeanna Fullerton.

President Virginia Taylor reported on the Spring Rally she and Verna Taylor attended in Somerset County.

The program for the evening was "Youth." Vivian Hildebrand and Christina Lessig of Boyertown High Key Club were the guest speakers.

Home economics awards will be given to Mandi Transue of Boyertown Senior High, Greta Fraun of Junior High West, and Sarah Gehart of Junior High East.

The next meeting on July 2 will be at the home of Virginia Taylor in Hereford.

Youth Day Camps
Montgomery County 4-H will again be offering two summer day camp opportunities for youth, one with an animal science theme and the other with an International aspect.

The International 4-H Day Camp will be held July 30-August 2nd at the 4-H Center in Creamery. All youth ages 8-12 as of January 1, 1996 are welcome to attend the four-day session which

Berks Society 6

Berks County Farm Women #6 met at the home of Barbara Kelnher recently. Ernie Shane from Reading Bone presented a program on chemical usage and safety on farms.

Pleasantville Inn was the meeting place for everyone's birthday party in May. Gifts were exchanged after a delicious meal and fellowship. A donation was made to the county farm women state project this year which benefits 4-H clubs. The next meeting will be at the home of Linda Youse.

Society 20

Rollin and Betty Reinheimer, owners of Edgewood Acres, hosted Farm Women 20 on June 11. Edgewood Acres, near Jones-town, is an Emu farm.

Rollin explained how he and Betty became interested in the "big" bird after visiting the Pennsylvania Farm Show a few years ago.

The Rheinheimers modeled their operation similar to Texan Emu Farms. Texas is the largest producer of these unique birds.

While touring the pens, we were serenaded by the "drumming" sounds of the female Emu. These fascinating birds have a broad market. The meat is similar to beef but less fatty. The oil is processed into many health care products. Even the unfertilized eggs are marketed for decoration and jewelry.

At our business meeting, Charlene Ziegler reported the state Farm Women trip will be the Polar Bear Express to Canada. The dates are June 13-21, 1997.

Oct. 9, 1996 is the date set for the county convention at Schaeferstown Fire Hall.

The trip committee reported a trip is planned for Aug. 5, 1996 to the Leola Produce Market.

The July meeting will be held at Vera Gross'.

The meeting was adjourned by singing "Brighten The Corner."

Lebanon Society 21

Eleven members were present for the June meeting of Lebanon Farm Women Society 21 hosted by Ev and Sheila Donmoyer. The evening was to be a night of fun (miniature golf). But due to rain, the "holes in one" were postponed till July. The meeting was opened by the "Pledge to Flag" and the "Lord's Prayer." Sheila had a reading entitled "On the Porch."

Details were discussed about an upcoming sale. (The Farm Women will hold the food stand.) A report was read on the county meeting. And the "mystery trip" will be soon solved. Lorraine Sluey handed out a pen with their farm name on it to each member. A game was played. Ev and Sheila served homemade ice cream and strawberries, pretzels, and crackers with iced tea to drink.

will capitalize on the Olympic Village concept and provide an opportunity for youth to learn about the people and cultures of several countries.

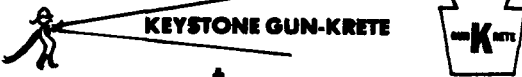

A typical day will include opening ceremonies, cultural workshops, games, crafts and more. Campers are to bring their own lunch but snacks will be provided.

The International Day camp sessions run from Tuesday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., at the 4-H Center in Creamery located on Route 113 one mile south of Skippack. To defray the cost of materials, a fee of $20 for the first child and $15 for each additional family member will be charged.

According to the camp coordinator, Angela Ferrailoi, "We look forward to giving youth a chance to observe the beauty and wonder of the world around us. Campers will have an opportunity to meet people from other countries and make new friends here. Our world is a beautiful place, a place which deserves respect."

The popular Animal Science Day Camp will also be offered again this year. Youth ages 9-12 as of January 1, 1996, are welcome to attend, and will be given opportunities for hands-on activities and learning. Campers will explore the world of various animals, ranging from rabbits and zoo animals to horses and cows. Animal Science Day Camp will be held Monday through Friday July 15-19, from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. A few sessions will be held off site, one day being at an area horse farm and another at the Elmwood Park Zoo. The $40 per camper fee will help cover costs of T-shirts, presenters, written materials and the field trip. Enrollment for this camp is limited.

You do not need to be a previous 4-H member to attend either camp, but will become a member for the year by being in either session. For more information or to request a brochure for registration, contact the 4-H Center at (610) 489-4315. You may also stop in at the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office, located in the Farm, Home and 4-H Center on Route 113, to register in person. Business hours are 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

DUSHORE (Sullivan County)
— Jessica Lambert of Dushore was chosen to be the 1996-1997 Sullivan County dairy princess at ceremonies held recently.

Chosen as her alternate was Kristina Pardoe of Forksville.

Four dairy maids compete the dairy promotion team: Jill Broschart of Dushore, Sandra Pardoe of Dushore, Carrie Dunn of Forksville, and Melissa Dunn of Forksville.

Lambert is the daughter of William and Jody Lambert. She will be a junior at Sullivan County High School this fall where she is active in Students Against Drunk Driving, varsity club, basketball, and cross-country. She is also a member of the National Honor Society and was the sophomore class president.

As an active 4-H member, Lambert belongs to the horse and pony club, the dairy club, and is a county council member.

When other activities aren't on her agenda, Lambert helps on her family's 500-acre dairy farm. Currently at Lambert Farms, Inc., the family milks 300 Holsteins in a double 16 Herringbone parlor which was built in 1994. Lambert herself owns four dairy animals.

The daughter of James and Dottie Pardoe, Kristina Pardoe will be a senior this fall at Sullivan County High School.

While in school, Pardoe is active in chorus and the National Honor Society. She is also a member of the 4-H trail trotters club and enjoys reading and babysitting.

Her family's farm, Valley View, has been in the family for 125 years. They milk 70 Holsteins.

During the pageant, each contestant was required to give a three- to five-minute speech.

Lambert impressed the judges with her knowledge of farming as she started with a "help wanted" advertisement.

"Wanted, someone to work seven days a week . . . to be on call 24 hours a day . . . with limited vacation time . . ." Lambert began.

She then continued to list the various jobs that a dairy farmer might have to do in a given day, ranging from being a veterinarian

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent
MAINESBURG (Tioga Co.) —
Screams of joy sounded throughout the Mainesburg Community Hall as Lisa Fitch was selected

Tioga County dairy princess recently.

Among the first to congratulate her was Jennifer Johnson, selected to be the 1996 alternate dairy princess and Regina Groover, who was named dairy ambassador.

Fitch is the daughter of Elwin and Charlene Fitch of Roaring Branch. She will be a junior this fall at Canton Junior-Senior High School. After graduation from high school, Fitch hopes to attend Wilson College to major in equestrian studies.

An active Country Warriors 4-H Club member, Fitch is also involved in the American Field
Services, the Foreign Language
Club, and Students Against Drunk Driving.

Fitch's family operates Four Wynds Dairy where they milk 70 cows. Lisa herself owns 10 dairy animals.

Fitch showed her love of dairy in her skit which she performed for the audience and judges. Dressed as a farmer, Fitch had a good talk with "Bessie" about the benefits of drinking milk and eating real dairy products.

"Bessie, can I ask you a couple of personal questions?" Fitch asked the cow. "What is your favorite type of cheese?" After a pause, Fitch replied, "That's not fair! When did 'all' become a type of cheese?"

She then listed the many types of cheese and other dairy products and their benefits before asking her final question, "Do you give more milk with the radio off or on?"

Having learned a lot from listening to her favorite cow, she finally exclaimed, "Bessie, Bessie, you're right. When you've got milk, you've got it all!"

Next to the front of the stage was Jennifer Johnson, the 16-year-old daughter of Charles and Sandy Johnson of Tioga. A junior at Elk-land Area High School, Johnson is the junior class president, secretary of the student council, National Honor Society secretary, and the Elkland Youth Education Association co-president. She also plays varsity volleyball and basketball.

In addition, she is an active member of the Mountaineers 4-H Club. She owns four dairy animals which she enjoys working with and showing. Her family farms 367 acres and they have 80 Holstein and Brown Swiss cattle.

In her presentation, Johnson managed the "Milky Way Cafe" and invited all the friends and guests to enjoy some delicious dairy treats.

1995 Tioga County Dairy Princess Jolene Hultz crowns her successor, Lisa Fitch.

Using a portable phone, she answered many questions posed by her friends and relatives about milk.

"Ring . . . Ring . . . Grandpa, how many times must I tell you, just because your cholesterol is a little bit high doesn't mean you can't have milk," she said as she explained that milk with all its benefits is a healthy snack, especially the lowfat versions.

Regina Groover of Canton competed in the pageant along with the other contestants.

The 18-year-old daughter of Richard Groover and Tere Mud-hard, Groover is a 1996 graduate of Canton High School. She plans to attend Penn Tech in the fall, majoring in early childhood education.

A member of the Country Warriors 4-H Club, Regina has shown cows in the past. She also loves to play volleyball, basketball, and softball.

Following through on her love of sports, Groover blew her whistle to get her team in line.

"You did remember to drink your milk, didn't you?" she said.
"Well, I think it's time for a new game plan. This is how we're going to play the game. Milk has of all the nutrients in milk that testants was to answer a question.

CONSUMER PRODUCTS: THREAT OR TREAT?

New consumer products featured on TV or in newspaper ads sound great, but will they enhance or endanger the food?

According to USDA Meat & Poultry Hotline, home economist, consumers need to read the fine print and question where the produce will contribute to foodborne illness. Let's take a look at three different products.

- Thawing tray. The tray is made of superconductive metal alloys that allow frozen food to defrost speedily at room temperature. It uses no energy or chemicals and doesn't warm the food.

Food must be handled properly when defrosting food on this tray. It is important that the surface of the food lays flat against the tray's surface and to account for the food's size, shape, and thickness. To remain safe, raw meats and poultry should be at room temperature no longer than two hours, and if room temperature is above

The thawed food may be cooked immediately or it may be refrigerated one or two days. After cooking, the food must be refrigerated within two hours. Also very important, after use, the thawing tray must be washed with hot soapy water to prevent cross-contamination of bacteria to other foods.

- Disposable temperature indicators are single use, cardboard thermometers. The manufacturer recommends using them to verify that hamburger patties are cooked to 160°F, the temperature at which E. Coli 0157:H7 should be destroyed. It can also be used to check pork, eggs, and other foods requiring cooking to 160°F. The cardboard strip has a white material inside its plastic coated tip. When inserted into food which has reached 160°F, the white material changes to clear and the tip changes to black. Each strip is intended for one-time use only.

This product was originally intended for food service but has begun to be sold in retail packages. It could be useful for the home cook, especially for people "at risk" for foodborne illness, on a picnic, or whenever a regular thermometer is not available.

One of these cardboard thermometers could easily be carried in the pocket or purse for use when ordering takeout meals or at family gatherings where the food handling practices of other cooks are questionable!

Consumers would have to use the product properly, however. If the consumer inserts the indicator and finds the hamburger undercooked, another indicator must be used to check the hamburger a second time. It's possible for bacteria from the undercooked patty to cross-contaminate the safely done patty if only one were used. Consumers should insert the cardboard exactly in the thickest part of the food. Hamburgers must reach 160°F throughout in order to ensure they are safe to eat.

- Thermoelectric cooler/warmer. These devices that plug into a car's cigarette lighter are meant to replace the ice-filled insulated cooler as well as keep foods warm. Cooler/warmers are advertised to store food 45 degrees below the outside air temperature. Some manufacturers even suggest food can be reheated in it, but the maximum heating temperature advertised for these devices is 125°F. There is a question as to whether they keep foods at a safe temperature.

Microbiologists and food science experts at USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service have voiced great concerns about temperatures at which these cooler/warmers claim to store or heat foods.

This is their concern: Pathogens can grow and multiply at temperatures between 40°F and 140°F. Summer temperatures often exceed 85°F and the interior of a car can reach 160°F in a matter of minutes in the summertime, even with the windows partially open. The food would then be in the "danger zone" at a temperature where foodborne bacteria multiply rapidly.

Likewise, the maximum heating temperature of 125°F is unsafe. In fact, cooked warm food may become dangerous after two hours at this temperature. It's impossible to reheat cold food to steamy hot in the devices. As advertised, the thermoelectric cooler/warmer may not keep food safe, either cold or hot. Continue to keep cold food cold in an insulated picnic cooler with plenty of ice or frozen gel packs.

to transforming himself into a crop expert.

She also reminded the crowd, "If it weren't for the dairy farmer, you wouldn't have milk for your coffee or cheese for your pizza..."

In her presentation, Kristina traced our history, reminding the people that "for centuries, out of necessity, every household was in touch with agriculture to provide food for their families."

In contrast, today people are so far removed from the source of their food that they often forget about the farmer.

She then talked about the benefits of farm life from being able to see a small seed grow into a healthy plant to seeing the miracle of life when a new calf is born.

"Centuries ago, everyone was a farmer," she concluded. "Today everyone needs a farmer."

At the pageant, 1995 Sullivan County Dairy Princess Carrie Hotenstein addressed the crowd before passing on her title. She thanked everyone for supporting her in her year and for their help in promoting dairy products.

Judges for the pageant were Russell Gunton, Region 3 director of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture in Tunkhannock; Victor Cappucci Jr., who worked for Farm Credit for 15 years and is now a private financial consultant; and Carl Shaffer, vice president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and the president of the Foundation for Ag Awareness.

The pageant followed the annual Sullivan County dairy parade, where entries each carried the theme, "Milk — Go for the White Gold!"

would strive above my best to go and prove to Pennsylvania and Tioga County that I could be all I could be!"

The question picked by Johnson related to what farm life has to offer young people and if she would continue to live on the farm. She answered, "I think that farm life offers responsibility, because kids grow up and they know they need to do chores. They know what needs to be done and they learn how to be dependable. I think I would definitely like to live on a farm."

Groover's question was, "What do you think is the best way to promote milk?" She replied, "The best way to promote milk depends on who you're speaking to. If you're speaking to adults, you should speak more to adults or if you're speaking to teenagers, you might want to liven it up a little. If you're speaking to children you should stay active so they want to (hear it)," she explained.

Following the skits and questions, judges Becky Steppe of Lycoming County, Wanda Derr of Lycoming County, and Charles Ruslavage of Clarion County had the task of making the final decision.

Before passing on her title, 1995 Tioga County Dairy Princess Jolene Hultz commented that she couldn't believe her reign was up.

She couldn't thank the people who helped her enough, and highlighted the changes in her life.

"I remember sitting up here last year and listening to Laura's speech and thinking, If I win, what would I say?" she recalled. "That seemed so far away, though, and yet it seems like only yesterday. So much has happened over this past year, not only being dairy princess, but in my life. I was a high school senior only two days before the pageant and now I'm on my way to being a sophomore in college. I feel like so much has happened. It was just yesterday, though."

As a final duty, Hultz and her 1995 alternate, Heather Wood, gave new sashes to the dairy maids and crowned their successors.

Seven girls will serve Tioga County as dairy maids in the coming year: Kristina Baker, daughter of William and Rebecca Baker of Covington; Roberta Baker, daughter of John Baker and Pat Chrzan of Mansfield; Rebecca Heyler, daughter of Ken and Susan Heyler of Morris; Trisha McIlwain, daughter of Bill and Diane McIlwain of Roaring Branch; Ellen Norman, daughter of Ernest and Dorothy Norman of Liberty; Emily Norman, daughter of David and Aggie Norman of Liberty; and Emily Ostrom, daughter of John and Diane Ostrom of Liberty.

Bethlehem To Host Regional 4-H Fashion Revue

BETHLEHEM (Lehigh Co.) — On Wednesday, July 10, Moravian College in Bethlehem will host the Southeast Regional 4-H Fashion Revue. Seventy-five youth ranging from 8 to 19 years old will represent their area counties.

Penn State Cooperative Extension staff and volunteers have planned educational workshops, judging activities, and a culminating show as a part of this year's revue, "The Fabric of Success."

A special highlight this year will be a community service project. 4-H'ers will work together to sew costumes and other "dress-up" clothes for children in the Lehigh Valley who live in homeless shelters and have few resources or play toys of their own.

The public is invited to a late afternoon show where participants will model prom gowns, sportswear, tailored jackets, and other garments that they have constructed. The show will begin at 4:15 p.m. in the Hauptert Union Building Auditorium with greetings from Dr. Gary San Julian, southeast regional director for Penn State Cooperative Extension. A presentation of the teen-sewn children's costumes will be made to representatives of Third Street Alliance, Easton.

Prior to the show, judges will have reviewed each of the entries for style, fit, appearance, design, and construction quality. Junior and senior winners will be selected and announced based on these criteria at the conclusion of the show.

The eight senior winners will advance to the State Fashion Revue competition in State College on August 7.

Here Is Your SUN Area Dairy Princess

By Becky Dugan

As many girls before me, I had the pleasure of crowning this year's SUN Area dairy princess, Jennifer Hollenbach from Winfield and her alternate, Lola Shaner from Turbotville.

Our 22 Annual Dairy Princess Pageant, sponsored by Boscov's Department Store in Hummels Wharf, was held June 22 as part of the Susquehanna Valley Mall's three-day Dairy Days Celebration.

During the ceremony, dairy maids Lisa Heimbach, Jennifer McWilliams, Jessica Risser, Rachel Risser, Samantha Troxell (all from Snyder County), and Amanda Strouse from Northumberland County were given banners. Their job is to assist or fill in for the princess and alternate if both are busy.

Also, 12 girls were given the title of dairy miss: Mary Aurand, Amanda Hauck, Dawn Heimbach, Tina Hollenbach, Heather Klinger, Melissa McWilliams, Brit-tany Rice, Janelle Risser, Amanda Shaffer, Laci Shirey, Corinda Varner (all from Snyder County), and Katie Gessner, from Union County. Their job is to assist the princess and alternate.

Dawn Marie from "Big Country" Radio was the mistress of ceremonies. Karen Auker provided the music for the evening. Mrs. Jane Hawn, public relations director, narrated the fashion show. During the pageant, all of the girls modeled clothing furnished by the Boscov's store. FFA boys from Danville, Selinsgrove, Mifflinburg, and Middleburg served as escorts.

As the new princess, Jennifer Hollenbach will take over promoting the dairy industry within the Snyder, Union, Northumberland, and Montour counties.

Jennifer, daughter of Jay and Jane Hollenbach of Winfield, is a junior at Selinsgrove High School and is president of the Selinsgrove FFA Chapter, member of Peer Support, and church youth group. She lives with her parents, two brothers, Michael, and Gregory and one sister Tina on a 220-acre farm, where they milk 42 Holsteins and raise corn, alfalfa, oats, younger sisters, ages 17, 15, and 13, all are pitching in, as they always have. They also are excited about my year as dairy princess and have been nothing but encouraging and helpful. They have helped with resource material and mailings and the ever-dreaded chores when I couldn't be there. I know that with friends and family such as I have I'm in for a great reign.

We have become good friends in a short amount of time and I know I can speak for her also when I say we are both looking forward to a great year representing the dairy industry and working together to make it happen.

As a team, we helped a local 4-H club sell ice cream at the Honesdale Agway Dairy Day sale that was set up to celebrate June Dairy Month. We have been invited to several parades and have another speaking engagement lined up already.

I have been busy preparing articles for a number of local papers. I am hoping that they will be accepted. I have a seminar to attend from July 8-11 and I need to work on a speech and a 3-5 minute presentation for children along with all the regular farm work.

Now don't think I'm implying that I'm the only help here. I'm not. My mom and my three

JANELLE SWINGLE

Wayne County Dairy Princess
As Wayne County dairy princess, and daughter of a farmer, I fully understand the frustrations the last couple weeks of weather have brought to the area. But what a difference a day makes.

Personally, I welcomed a day or two when I felt I could take the time to fill some of the obligations that require our attention but also keep us from the outdoors. After a long hard winter it just makes me smile to be in the open air.

I was elected as Wayne County's dairy princess on June 8, along with Jessica Chyle, who is our alternate. I received a very large amount of reading material containing helpful hints and lists of requirements and of suggestions to make my year a productive and enjoyable one.

I was excited to say the least, but for a week or so I still had school to contend with and I am grateful this included graduation. I'm now among the alumni of Western Wayne High.

I have decided to forego any further formal schooling at the moment. I want to work the farm with my dad. He has informed me that if I think my education is over, I'd best thing again — farming is an everyday education, and some of what we learn we'd like to forget.

I shall not be discouraged! I'm doing what I love and have had my heart set on since I was a very little girl and I'm just stubborn and determined enough to make it happen. I think I have the best of both worlds right now — I can be the grease monkey that I enjoy and reign as a princess, at least for this year. I intend to make the most of both!

For my first act as Wayne County Dairy Princess, I was asked to speak at a dinner meeting for Welsh Farms. I was nervous, but I knew I was among friends and that Jessica was with me in thought.

Jessica has been a tremendous help in just a short amount of time. She had the pleasure of previously serving as a Wayne County dairy maid and she is more than generous with the knowledge and experience she gained at that time.

and soybeans. Jen owns two Holsteins. She also likes to line dance in her leisure time.

Lola Shaner, the new alternate dairy princess, is the daughter of Lowell and Bonnie Shaner of Turbotville. She is a senior at Warrior Run High School and plans to attend college and study to be a veterinarian.

In school, Shaner is on the Student Council, Tri-Hi-Y, YEA, AFS, and plays softball. She lives with her parents and one brother, Brian, on a 110-acre farm where they milk 35 Holsteins and raise corn and hay.

I would like to thank and congratulate all who attended. This year is filled with enthusiastic and energetic girls. Good luck to all of you.

Wolfgang Reigns As Bucks-Montgomery Princess

Karen Wolfgang, seated, the newly crowned 1996-1997 Bucks-Montgomery dairy princess, is joined by Jennifer Lear, Bucks-Montgomery alternate dairy princess, and Diane Yoder, 1993-1994 Bucks-Montgomery dairy princess, who crowned the new royalty.

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — Karen Wolfgang, a senior at Boyertown Area High School, was crowned the 1996-1997 Bucks-Montgomery dairy princess during a pageant held June 15 at the Quakertown Christian School.

Karen, 17, is the daughter of Robert and Gail Wolfgang of Bechtelsville. She grew up on her family's dairy farm in Montgomery County and is an active 4-H member.

As the Bucks-Montgomery Dairy Princess, she will promote milk and dairy products at schools, grocery stores, county fairs, community events, and farm meetings throughout the two-county area.

An honor roll student at Boyertown Area High School, Karen serves as co-captain of the track team. She is president of her local 4-H Club and enjoys showing dairy cattle. She and her sisters, Amy and Brenda, and brother Seth recently formed a partnership called Amber-Knoll Farm. They own 40 cows.

During the pageant, Karen presented a speech about the importance of calcium in the diet and its role in preventing osteoporosis, a bone crippling disease. She also presented a skit, complete with a handmade picture book, that served as an introduction to school children about to visit a dairy farm.

Karen will be joined in her promotion duties by alternate Bucks-Montgomery Dairy Princess Jennifer Lear. Jennifer, 18, daughter of Hope Lear of Plumsteadville, is a junior at Central Bucks East High School. She is a member of the 4-H Dairy Club and works part time on the Harold and Tim Haldeman farm in Doylestown. Her hobbies include swimming, volleyball, and showing cows.

For her pageant speech, Jennifer spoke about the importance of dairy farming and dairy products. For her skit, she designed a puzzle highlighting various dairy products.

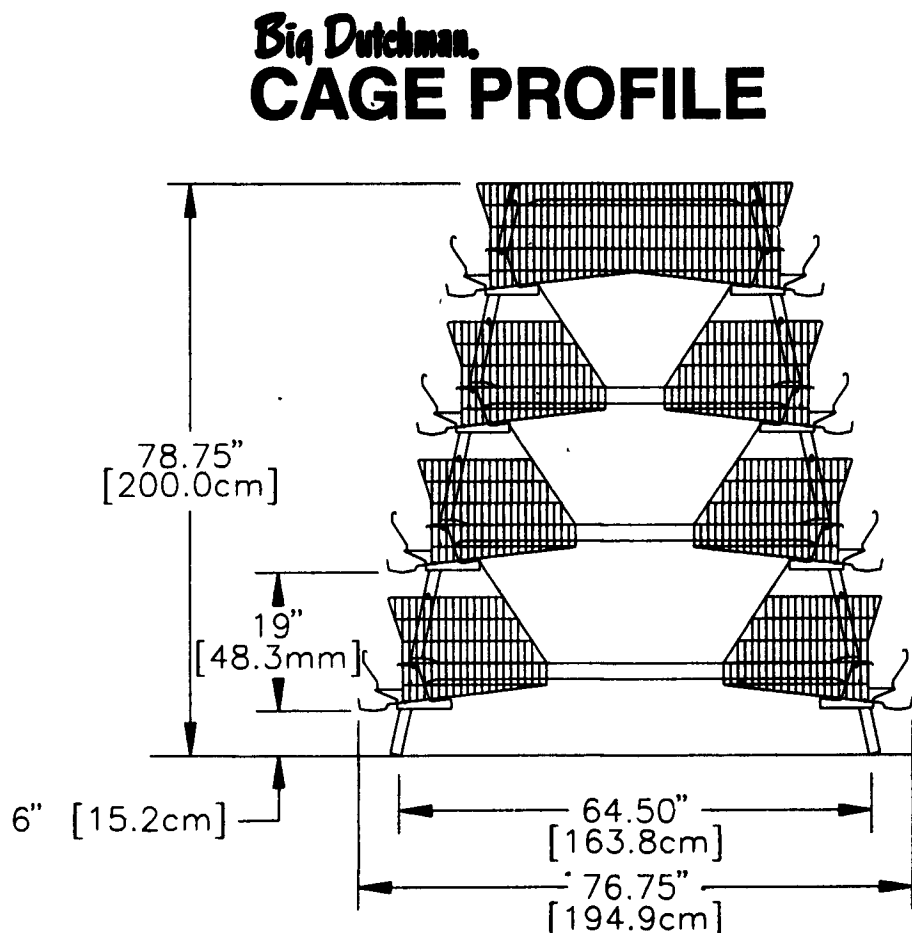

Also eager to help promote the dairy industry are Dairy Maids Lizzie Moser, the daughter of Daniel and Darlene Moser of Gilbertsville, and Christine Michalik, the daughter of Richard and Cynthia Michalik of Sellersville. Both teens are active 4-H members and have shown dairy cows for several years.

Judges for the pageant were Ellen Fuller, nutrition education specialist for Dairy Council Inc. of Southampton; Ernie Miller, a Berks County dairy farmer; and Walter Wurster, Chester County extension agent. Michael Fournier, Bucks County extension agent, was master of ceremonies. Entertainment was provided by Eileen Shull Mitchell, the 1979-1980 Bucks County Dairy Princess and 1979-1980 Pennsylvania State Dairy Princess.

FRESH AND FLAVORFUL SALSA AND EGGPLANT

What goes into salsa? While your recipe may differ from your neighbors, most recipes include garden "fresh" tomatoes, onions, cilantro, parsley, basil and a "secret" ingredient. That secret is tomatillos. These small tomato-like plants are easy to grow. They produce a tart-flavored fruit with a texture that really makes salsa.

Toma Verde is an excellent tomatillo variety for making salsa. It has small, ping pong ball size fruit that forms inside a paper husk that splits when the fruit is ripe. Fully ripened tomatillos are yellow in color. For salsa, harvest while they are green and before the paper husk splits. Be sure to remove and discard the husk before chopping.

Cilantro, another important ingredient in salsa, is easy to grow in the garden. There is no substitute for the tangy flavor of cilantro. It grows fast in garden beds or pots in a sunny location. If cilantro is new to you and your family, use it sparingly in salsa recipes until you develop a liking for it.

Parsley, another easy to grow garden herb has a much milder flavor than cilantro. Both cilantro and parsley add color as well as flavor to your garden and to your salsa. For even more color, add green and purple varieties of basil. One of my favorite basil varieties that can even be used in large landscape plantings is called purple ruffles.

What about eggplant with salsa? Eggplant may not be your kids' favorite but it's easy to grow in "great and small" gardens that are hot, hot, hot... To get the maximum number of eggplant for broiling or roasting, feed the plant with fertilizer and keep their roots cool by mulching. An important harvesting tip is to cut off the fruits rather than pull them off when ripened. Ripened fruit will be glossy and firm. Over-ripened fruit starts to soften and turn dull. Try your next eggplant on a pizza.

4-H Scholarships Awarded

Three Lebanon County 4-H members were awarded $1,000 scholarships during a recent meeting of the Lebanon County 4-H board of directors monthly meeting. Erin Frey, Lebanon; Kathy Habecker, Palmyra; and Amy Smith, Lebanon were chosen based on their 4-H experience, community involvement, and academic achievement.

Erin is the daughter of Ted and Nancy Frey, Lebanon. She will be a freshman physical therapy and Spanish major at the University of Scranton this fall.

A member of the South Mountain 4-H Community Club, Erin has participated in the 4-H textile science and fashion revue program for the past 10 years. She is vice president of her 4-H club after serving as the club's president for the past four years.

A senior at Lebanon High School, Erin is a member of the track and field, cross country, and field hockey teams. She also is a physical therapy volunteer at the Good Samaritan Hospital and a member of the county Teen Health Board.

"Through club service projects such as food baskets for the needy, Christmas caroling for shut-ins, riding bike for the heart fund, and working at the fair, I feel 4-H club members have made a real impact in our community," Erin said in explaining her 4-H experience.

Kathy is the daughter of Mark and Darlene Habecker, Palmyra. She will be a freshman early childhood education major at Messiah College in the fall.

A member of the Kelly Helpers 4-H Community Club and the No-SoAnn 4-H Dairy Club, she is enrolled in foods and nutrition, ceramics, leadership, and dairy projects. Kathy has shown her dairy cows in type, fitting, and showmanship classes at the Lebanon Area Fair and is a member of the county Dairy Quiz Bowl team.

A senior at Palmyra High School, Kathy is a member of the track team and a peer counselor. She is also very active in the Lebanon County Junior Holstein Club and her church youth group.

Kathy credits the leadership skills she acquired through 4-H projects, serving as a teen leader, and holding various club offices to her successful experiences in school and community activities.

Amy is the daughter of Henry and Sandra Smith, Lebanon. She will be a freshman communications major at Philadelphia College of the Bible this fall.

A member of the Extra Special Puppy 4-H Club, Amy and her family have raised 14 puppies for the Seeing Eye. She has served as club president and a trainer for the project. Members raise puppies for one year and then the dogs are returned to the Seeing Eye for specialized training and replacement with blind individuals.

A senior at Annville-Cleona High School, Amy is a member of the math club and has assisted in coaching speech students for oratorical contests. She is a member of her church handbell choir and has participated in summer mission projects.

"In 4-H, I credit my most rewarding experience as meeting various blind persons who have guide dogs and learning how their lives were transformed by their dogs. Their heartfelt thanks is the greatest reward that I could ever ask to have," Amy said of her 4-H experience.

Each 4-H member received a $1,000 check and a certificate from the Lebanon County 4-H Trust Fund. Youth between the ages of 8 and 19 are eligible to join the 4-H program which encourages "learn-by-doing" projects and activities.

The annual Bucks County 4-H Fashion Revue was held June 21 at the Heritage Towers in Doylestown.

The participants were all members of the Hilltown 4-H Club. The participants modeled the outfits they made.

Awards were presented to the five top models in the junior and senior divisions. Two alternates were selected in the senior division and one in the junior division.

Sew Smart Fabrics of Doylestown, The Souder Store of Souderton, FabricCenters of America, Inc., and F. London Textiles of Bensalem donated awards for the ceremony. Participants made children's tote bags which were filled with various toys donated by Foster's Toys of Doylestown, Leshar's of Perkasie, and Friendly Book Store of Quakertown. These tote bags were presented to a representative from A Woman's Place during the ceremony which began at 7 p.m.

Five senior and five junior winners will participate at the Southeast Regional 4-H Fashion Revue on July 10 at Moravian College, Bethlehem. Winners were seniors Rachel Welsh, Elizabeth Schweitzer, Kim Reichner, Julia Krout, and Robin Schilling and juniors Mark Smedberg, Leanne Lightcap, Sharla Remick, Amber Brumbaugh, and Victoria Miller. Also participating were Chara Histand, Sophia Histand, Abby Miller, and Amanda Miller. All the 4-H members participating in this year's fashion revue are members of the Hilltown 4-H Club.

4-H Members Are Ready For Fashion Revues

The sounds of sewing machines have been more numerous than the first bees of summer in Lancaster County for the past few weeks.

The fun kicks off on July 8 when 4-H Sewing members meet for the Lancaster County 4-H Fashion Revue. In addition to having the outfits they have made judged, the tailors will attend field trips to Joann Fabrics and Janell Barte Designs. The day will end with a fashion show at 7 p.m. that evening at the Farm and Home Center.

For eight junior and senior members, the fun won't end at the county level. The following day they will compete at the Capitol Region Fashion Revue held in Harrisburg. Seven from the region will earn the privilege to advance to the State 4-H Fashion Show held at Penn State during State Achievement Days.

Lancaster 4-H Shooting Sports Gear Up For The Summer

Lancaster County 4-H shooting sports are preparing for another year of competition and fun. On July 10 archery, air rifle, and air pistol 4-H members will compete for spaces on the Lancaster County teams.

Lancaster 4-H shooting sport teams have traditionally done well at 4-H State Achievement Days held at Penn State University in August. The senior archery team has finished in first place for the past two years. In 1995 all four

4-H Leaders Forum

A 4-H leader from Bradford County attended the 1996 Pennsylvania State 4-H Leader's Forum recently held at the Days Inn in State College. The leaders participated in workshops focusing on topics that will help them become better teachers and youth counselors. Leaders and agents attending from Bradford County were Cindy Williams, 4-H leader and Tom Maloney, 4-H/agricultural agent.

The junior archery team has recorded a first and second place finish in the last two years. Last year one countian finished as the top junior air rifle in the state. The public will have the opportunity to see them at their best July 15 at the 4-H Fair in Lampeter.

Presentation Day

Set For 4-H

On July 11, youth from throughout the county will demonstrate their talents in public speaking. Speeches and presentations cover everything from proper horse care to ice cream making to baseball games. Every year 4-H members are judged at the county level before qualifying for the state competition.

4-H Day Camp Is An Environmental Extravaganza

They are all a part of 4-H Day Camp to be held July 25.

Approximately 100 4-H youth from Lancaster County will spend a day at Holtwood for a day of fun and learning about the world of nature we usually overlook. 4-H'ers will get a tour of the hydroelectric facilities in the power plant. At another station they will get the opportunity to learn about animal skulls from Dr. Roger Wilson. At the final station Chauty Ault will teach the youth about the exciting world of insects.

4-H Fair Opens

The Fair Season

The fair season is rapidly approaching, so 4-H members across the county are scrambling to put the finishing touches on their projects.

The first fair of the 1996 season will open Wednesday, August 14, at the Lampeters Fairgrounds. A talent show by 4-H members will kick it all off.

The fair is the culmination of many hours of work for hundreds of Lancaster County 4-H'ers. Their projects, everything from pygmy goats to rockets, are judged on individual basis, not as a comparison between members. In addition to projects the 4-H fair boasts sheep, horse, and goat shows.

There is plenty to eat and do at the fair. Clubs have food stands and game booths. It is also an excellent time for the public to view the accomplishments of 4-H members.

On Thursday there will be presentations given, a sheep show, a horse show, a rocketry demonstration, a Seeing Eye Dog demonstration, an archery, air rifle, and air pistol demonstration, and a commodity contest. This year the commodity contest will feature the egg industry. The fair opens Wednesday, August 14 at 7 p.m. and runs through Friday, August. For more information contact the 4-H office at (717) 394-6851.

B.U.C.S. OWNER'S REPORT #52

The Word Is Out!

B.U.C.S. Owner's Report

- ✓ Increased Storage Capacity
- ✓ Better Feed Quality
- ✓ Faster Unloading
- ✓ Lower Maintenance

is making big news!

Reports are coming in from B.U.C.S. owners everywhere. And they're reporting that their systems are delivering increased storage capacity, higher quality feed, faster unloading and reduced maintenance versus their old systems. Even in silos that had been retired! But don't take our word for it. Here's what your neighbor has to say about their B.U.C.S. System!

OWNER'S REPORT #52

"I like the big capacity way B.U.C.S. unloads. And with higher moisture haylage, we have better quality feed, with very low heat damage - test shows its 18% protein. Our operating costs are lower since it uses less electricity and it's easier to operate than a bottom unloader."

May 2-4 at the Greenville Junior-Senior High School in Greenville.

Students from New York state attended the convention to compete in various leadership contests, receive degrees and awards, and to participate in many leadership workshops and tours.

Penn Yan FFA members who attended were Jen Disbrow, Matt Fritz, Billy Hand, Natalie Jensen, Matt Lewis, Emily Lilyea, Mike Lilyea, Jim McElwee, Andrew Miller, Muffy Nelson, Marcy Quackenbush, Karl Roemmelt, Aaron and Steve Vaughan.

The chapter members really did a good job of putting Penn Yan FFA on the map. The chapter had many first-time accomplishments and many members won at the state level.

One of the most exciting contests for the FFA members was the junior creed contest that Emily Lilyea competed in. Emily was the first person from Penn Yan to ever compete at state level in the junior creed contest. She took second place.

Marcy Quackenbush won the title reporter of the year for submitting numerous articles to many newspapers throughout the year. Marcy was Penn Yan's first-ever reporter of the year.

Another first was the FFA Convention Yearbook Award. Penn Yan FFA sold the most ads than any other chapter, and Karl Roemmelt won a trophy for being the highest selling individual.

Another exciting contest that members competed in was the ag mechanics team. Those that competed were Mike Lilyea, Andrew Miller, Karl Roemmelt, and Steve Vaughan. They placed first out of five teams. Contestants had to complete a written exam, and demonstrate solving and hands-on performance skills.

At the National FFA Convention in November, Penn Yan will be representing New York State and competing against many other states for the national title.

The Penn Yan FFA Chapter donates money each year to the State FFA Association. The chapter has contributed more than $7,000 throughout the Penn Yan's FFA lifetime. The Penn Yan Chapter of FFA won the Bronze Eagle Award for lifetime contributions.

Another exciting part of the convention was when Marcy Quackenbush was elected as the New York State FFA District 8, president. She has been the first district president that Penn Yan has had in a long time.

Five Penn Yan FFA members received individual accomplishment awards. The members were Matt Scutt, ag placement; Natalie Jensen, dairy management; Tim Christiansen, dairy production; Matt Fritz, forestry; and Karl Roemmelt, greenhouse management.

Mike Lilyea took second in the state for his Fruit and Vegetable Production Proficiency Award for his employment at his family farm. Marcy Quackenbush took third in the state for her Fruit and Vegetable Production Proficiency Award. Marcy's proficiency consisted of employment at C.M. Hansen's Farm. Marcy Quackenbush also took first in the state for her Small Animal Care Proficiency Award. Marcy is employed at the Eastview Veterinary Clinic. She will be representing New York state at the National Convention for her Small Animal Care Proficiency Award.

Marcy also played in the New York State FFA Band for her second year in a row. Last year she was Penn Yan's first FFA member to be a part of the State FFA Band.

Mike Lilyea won the District 8 Star Empire Degree for his Empire Degree application in the field of fruit and vegetable production. Marcy Quackenbush also won the District 8 Star Empire Degree for her empire degree application in the field of ag placement.

Jennifer Disbrow won a $500 scholarship to Morrisville College for her involvement in the FFA and her work experience program.

Natalie Jensen placed first in the Dairy Breed Award. She has been Penn Yan's first Dairy Breed Award winner in many years.

The Penn Yan FFA had five recipients for the Empire Degree. This is the most Empire Degree winners that Penn Yan FFA has had at one time. The winners of the highest state degree were Jen Disbrow, ag placement; Jonna Egli, ag placement; Mike Lilyea, ag production; Andrew Miller, ag production; and Marcy Quackenbush, ag placement.

TEST-DRIVE

The all-new John Deere 5500 Tractor is the most powerful tractor in the 5000 Series line, yet it's priced lower than many tractors of comparable horsepower.
Ask your dealer for a test drive.

Enter from either side. Ease into the soft, yet supportive, spring-suspension seat. You get the type of comfort you expect from John Deere.

Settle in for productive work. Lower the standard-tilt steering wheel to a comfortable position. Set the automotive-style climate controls to your liking — warm or cool.

Look around and enjoy the excellent visibility in every direction. And look at what's standard: left-hand mirror, roof-mounted
include a right-hand mirror, windshield washer, and rear window wiper.

See how much more productive you can be in these tractors when you're protected from the weather. Ask your John Deere dealer about the new cab for 5000 Series Tractors.

WOODS PUT A BAT IN YOUR BARN BATWING 3180 - 3 SPINDLE MOWER

The Woods model 3180 is the toughest Batwing® mower we've ever built. It follows the tradition for rugged reliability we started in 1965 when we introduced the first Batwing. A unique "clean deck" design that resists cut material build-up, innovative Intra-Drive™ gearboxes engineered and built by Woods, and the fastest blade speeds of any mower in its class. With drivelines engineered to handle 40% more torque than many competitive mowers, the 3180 Batwing® cuts through the heaviest brush, up to three inches in diameter. Blade speed exceeding 16,000 feet per minute provide unbeatable mowing performance. EPA Approval Needed For Additional Field Tests

PRINCETON, N.J. — American Cyanamid Company has requested permission from the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to conduct field tests of a new, genetically-altered bioinsecticide.

When approved, the experiments will build upon successful tests Cyanamid conducted in 1995, and are part of the company's mission to discover, develop and market new, environmentally friendly products for use in commercial crop protection.

Lantz Crawley, Ph.D., executive vice president of Discovery for Cyanamid's agricultural products research division, said the bioinsecticide, a genetically engineered Autographa californica multiple nuclear polyhedrosis virus (V8EGTDEL-AaIT), would receive limited testing in 12 states (Alabama, Arkansas, California, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Jersey, North Carolina, Texas and Virginia) on cotton, vegetables and tobacco.

"While naturally occurring baculoviruses offer a suitable means of controlling pests, they normally take approximately 4-5 days to stop an insect from feeding, allowing it sufficient time to cause significant crop damage," Crawley said. "By modifying the genetic make-up of the baculovirus, we anticipate controlling targeted insects up to 60 percent faster than its naturally occurring counterpart. This could potentially save millions of dollars in lost or damaged crops."

As with the 1995 field tests, V8EGTDEL-AaIT would only target specific insect pests such as loopers and bud worms, and will not affect beneficial insect species.

DEALING WITH SUMMER HEAT

Associate Professor

With the early 1996 heat wave, many poultry managers learned that their equipment was not prepared or adequate to maintain birds without excessive mortality. Some had water system or ventilation equipment failures, others didn't react fast enough to the high temperatures, and others hadn't implemented management techniques for managing heat (i.e., morning feed removal, summer diets, etc.). The next heat waves will test the preparedness of those growers that weren't affected earlier.

Poultry managers need to first understand how birds cope with high temperatures before they can effectively control their house environment. When the anatomy of chickens and turkeys is examined, structures are found on their head that help alleviate heat stress. Featherless areas as well as comb and wattles are primary areas for the convective exchange of heat from birds. These areas include in vascularity to allow for heat transfer as air passes over them.

Many houses have automatic controls that operate the ventilation system under negative pressure with air inlets when ambient or outside air temperature is moderate to cool. When ambient temperature increases to 70 degrees F, for birds over four weeks of age, the system will automatically change from a conventional inlet ventilated system to a natural ventilation system. Then again, if the temperature continues to rise above 80 degrees F, the controls will change the system first stage of tunnel ventilation.

If heat continues to rise, the first and then a second stage of evaporative cooling will be activated in combination with tunnel ventilation. The computer controls are tools for managers and can be only as good as the manager's understanding of them. Other systems that have fewer staged changes can be as effective in ventilating poultry. If a farm isn't equipped with a computer system, then the manager will need to be present to evaluate house environmental changes and respond accordingly, especially during hot weather.

Other techniques to eliminate losses to heat stress have been tried and have had some success in preventing high mortality. Making sure that your fans are operating at peak efficiency is important in order to distribute the air across the heads of the birds at a velocity that will allow for maximum cooling. Fans hung down the center of the house with or without fogging nozzles have been used when a house isn't equipped with a tunnel system.

Removal of feed early in the morning to help reduce internal-body heat produced during the digestion process can help prevent high mortality. Feed is returned to the birds as temperature decreases in the evening.

Evaporative cooling, in association with negative pressure inlet ventilation, center fans, and with tunnel ventilation, can be effective in reducing temperature within the house by 8 to 10 degrees F. Evaporative cooling should only be used during the daytime and is not normally used after 7-8 p.m. when higher humidity decreases the effectiveness of cooling by evaporation.

Make sure all your emergency equipment is in working order. Birds have been lost when generators haven't worked in critical times, water pressures haven't been maintained, fogger nozzles are plugged, temperature sensors haven't signaled an alarm, or phone lines have been faulty.

Adequate preparation and determining how to react as ambient temperatures increase can prevent the anguish of carrying profits out to the compost pile.

Announces Hybrid Wheat Sale

SHAWNEE MISSION, Kan. — Agripro Seeds, Inc. has announced an agreement with Monsanto Company that is expected to strengthen Agripro's industry-leading varietal wheat breeding program.

Agripro has sold all assets of its hybrid wheat breeding program to Monsanto, effective June 20. The transaction transfers germplasm, facilities, equipment, and intellectual property to HybriTech® Seed International, a unit of Monsanto.

This agreement enhances the Agripro varietal wheat breeding program through licensing rights to HybriTech germplasm. Agripro also will continue to sell hybrid wheats through a distributor agreement with HybriTech.

"We're proud of the pioneering work we have done in hybrid wheat research and development," said Milton Allen, president of Agripro. "This agreement with Monsanto, however, will allow us to focus research on our line of varietal wheat. We lead the industry in our germplasm base and commitment to research, which has allowed us to produce a number of top-performing varieties and hybrids."

Agripro employees who will continue to conduct the varietal wheat breeding program will be housed in HybriTech facilities. All germplasm designated for variety development will be owned by HybriTech and licensed back to Agripro for use in the variety breeding program. In addition, Agripro will staff all variety wheat programs.

Both Agripro and HybriTech will streamline research operations and consolidate the breeding efforts of both companies. The Agripro hard red winter wheat, hard white winter wheat, and hard red spring wheat varietal research program will continue at the Agripro research center in Berthoud, Colo. HybriTech's hard red winter wheat breeding program, as well as its parental increase and foundation seed activities, will be relocated to Berthoud.

The Agripro northern soft red winter wheat variety program will relocate to the HybriTech facility in Lafayette, Ind. Agripro's southern soft red winter wheat and Canadian varietal wheat programs are unaffected by these staff organizations.

If you can compare the head of the turkey with the chicken, the turkey has larger areas of exposed skin to conduct heat away from its body. The increased featherless areas on the turkey's head help them with being less sensitive than broiler chickens to high ambient temperatures. Other featherless areas of the shank and the breast are also effectively used to dissipate heat.

Feathers are insulating agents that insulate the bird from the cold but also helps keep heat within the bird. Burrowing into the litter, reduced activity, increased water consumption and panting are behavioral techniques birds use to remove heat from their bodies.

However, the best method managers can use to reduce internal body temperature is to provide air movement (preferably cooled air) across the bird's head. Moving air directly over the birds has been part of the advantage of tunnel ventilation systems. Many other conventional ventilation designs can move air rapidly through a house during the summer, but it does not always direct air onto the bird's head and body.

Let us consider how a farm manager can use various items of equipment to help birds maintain temperature homeostasis. Water temperature can affect water consumption by the birds. At times of high temperature, water consumption is normally increased. When water temperature becomes too hot (>85 degrees F), however, birds will decrease water consumption.

The highest temperature is often at the ceiling in a house. When water is stored in plastic water pipes along the ceiling, one of two things will normally happen during hot weather: either the water temperature will increase to be equal to the temperature of the air, or if water flow is high enough, a temperature differential will occur and drops of condensation will appear on the pipe.

Many managers in times of extreme heat will make sure that water is either recycled or flushed periodically to prevent providing high temperature water to the birds that may further exacerbate bird cooling by reducing water intake and consequently, reducing cooling of the bird's internal body. Therefore, drinking systems and house water supply must be examined to ensure that they can adequately provide water, and preferably cool water, for the heat stressed birds.

"It's Show"by Keith A. B...

Instructor

Dairy and Animal
Coach, Penn State LivestockWITHOUT PREFERENCE OR PREJUDICE

Big doesn't necessarily mean better. Sunflowers aren't better than violets. — Edna Farber

An editorial appeared a few years back in the National Junior Livestock Exhibitor magazine that was written by Eldon Miller.

Mr. Miller clearly stated some unique perspectives to junior livestock shows and our need to clearly define the goals and purpose of particular shows. I have reprinted the editorial here and will add a few closing comments.

Editorial

The selection of the grand champion steer is the culmination of an entire year's planning, time and work, not only for the exhibitors with beef projects, but for extension personnel and show officials. It is these people who provide the guidelines and the facilities that make it possible to hold county, state and national shows that provide the opportunity to have beef project competition.

One of the most important considerations that affects the success of a steer or heifer show is that all concerned understand the goal and purpose of the program. Everyone who exhibits steers assumes that the goal of a market steer project is "to produce the most desirable market animal." If the actual goal and purpose is any different than this, then that information should be made available to the exhibitors far enough in advance of the show so they can select an animal that will meet the requirements and goals of the show.

Exhibitors realize there is a difference in judges' opinions of what constitutes the ideal market animal and they accept this. What they will not accept is a judge's decision based on something other

To protect the integrity of the show, the premium book should state the purpose and goals for the market beef contest. If the exhibitor entered a show with the understanding that the goal of the show was "to select the most desirable market animal," and he leaves with the belief that some other criteria was used to select the champion, he will feel he has been deceived. The result of this is that exhibitors will either drop out of competition rather than play with what they consider a stacked deck or they will do whatever they can to even the odds when they exhibit at that show. It is when the exhibitors try to even the odds that the show officials and extension personnel are left to wonder "Why did this happen at our show?"

If the very best market animal is not selected, then everyone involved is shortchanged: the exhibitor because he is deprived of a constructive learning experience and because he invested his time, money and effort in a project that did not fit the actual goal of the contest; the extension people because the opportunity for constructive teaching has been lost for an entire year; the show officials because they have not put forward a quality image of their show and the beef industry because they have not been given an ideal model as a goal to work toward.

It is the show's responsibility to state the goals and purpose of the contest and to be certain that the judge understands these goals. It is their responsibility to instruct the judge to make his placings in accordance with these goals.

To protect the integrity of the livestock show and the integrity of our youth programs and to maintain young people's interest in exhibiting, a judge must walk into the ring with only one goal in

Livestock Exhibitor

As we look to the future of our junior livestock programs and the role that shows and sales will play in the program, we should continually assess our goals and purpose for each activity in the program.

Clearly defining the goals, purpose, rules and rewards of an activity will benefit exhibitors, judges, extension personnel, show sponsors and officials, and everyone else involved.

With clearly defined set of goals and purpose, every judge should enter the ring and select the animal that best meets the stated goals, without preference for, or prejudice against, any color, breed, individual, or region.

that position. He is on personal leave in Poland as a followup to his previous participation in the Polish-American Extension Project, designed to assist Polish farmers through the transition period in adapting to a free market economy.

Curran achieved distinction during his extension career by organizing or promoting rural-urban events in one of Maryland's most populous counties. Among these activities have been Farm Visitation Day, Maryland Agriculture Week at major shopping malls, and the Baltimore Farmers Market.

On the commercial farm scene, Curran organized the Baltimore County weed control advisory board and supervised the Baltimore County Corn Club. He has served as an adviser for the Farmers Produce Association, Central Maryland Beekeepers Association, and the county committee of the USDA's Farm Service Agency. He was the longtime secretary of the county soil conservation district and extension liaison person with the county farm bureau organization.

He was planning committee chairman for the 1978 Mid-Atlantic No-Till Conference in the Hunt Valley Inn at Cockeysville.

Curran was instrumental in organizing the annual Baltimore County Field Crops Day, county field crop demonstration plots, tailgate farmers markets, nutrient management and integrated pest management programs, and a countywide grain marketing club.

Curran is a past president of both the Maryland Association of County Agricultural Agents and the National Association of County Agricultural Agents (NACAA). He was selected to participate in the NACAA's 1980 Dow Study Tour of California agriculture. He led a 21-person group of central Maryland farm leaders on a Goodwill "People to People" two-week tour of China in 1983 and a similar group on a corresponding tour of Europe in 1987.

A native of York County, Pa., Curran holds a bachelor's degree in agronomy from Penn State and advanced degrees in extension education from the University of Maryland at College Park.

Before joining the Cooperative Extension Service in Baltimore County, he spent 14 years as an agricultural sales representative for the Olin Corporation and two years as a field representative for the now-defunct Hungerford Packing Company of New Freedom, Pa.

Friends of Dick Curran are invited to a retirement celebration on July 19, beginning at 6 p.m. at Wilhelm Ltd. Caterers, along the southbound lane of Highway 140, south of Westminster. During the program, a book of letters and/or photos from friends will be presented to Dick.

Fowler Retires As Extension Director

Dr. Richard E. Fowler, director of Delaware Cooperative Extension, and his wife Nancy greet guests at a retirement picnic held in his honor.

NEWARK, Del. — "Extension is in Dick's blood," one colleague said. "He lives and breathes extension," said another. How else does one explain the lifetime dedication that Dr. Richard E. Fowler has to cooperative extension?

Fowler, who retired from the University of Delaware as director of Delaware Cooperative Extension on June 30, began his extension career in 1968. But like all good extension agents, his devotion to education goes beyond the bounds of employment. It's rooted in his daily life.

Having grown up on a small farm near Danville, Pa., where his father was the first extension agricultural agent for Montour County, Fowler learned early the importance of cooperative extension to agricultural communities. All the Fowler boys followed in their father's footsteps. While Fowler began his extension career as a livestock specialist, his brothers, who are twins, became ag agents with Penn State Extension.

Fowler received a bachelor's degree in animal husbandry from Penn State University. He earned a master's and a doctorate in animal science at the University of Maryland while serving as livestock manager on the College Park campus. His area of specialization was swine management, an interest that to this day is in evidence in his office. In fact, he still manages an eclectic herd of ceramic and cloth pigs that grace the tops of his office filing cabinets.

In 1968, Fowler joined the UD animal science faculty as a teacher and extension livestock specialist. He fit comfortably into extension's model, bridging education between the classroom and applied field experience.

"Being livestock specialist and teacher made me better at both jobs," Fowler said. "I would bring back to the classroom what I learned in the field, and I'd take my students to farm operations where they could see at work what they were learning."

In the mid-1970s as extension livestock specialist, Fowler was instrumental in establishing the swine unit at the Research and Education Center in Georgetown. He did it at the request of state legislature and the governor, who thought that a facility focusing on breeding management and farrowing confinement would be a boon to Delaware's swine industry.

Fowler became director of Delaware Cooperative Extension in 1984. Since that time he has guided the organization through major changes that were affecting extension programming nationwide. He also moved extension into the computer age and oversaw the extension's successful transition to issue-based programming around such initiatives as water quality and at-risk youth.

An unassuming man, Fowler is not comfortable in the limelight. When told he's described as one who exemplifies the extension mission of people helping people, he turns the focus on others, as he did at a recent luncheon where he was honored by his extension colleagues.

"Nancy has to share this recognition with me because she was with me every step of my career," he said. "And any accomplishment achieved while I was director is a team accomplishment, a reflection of your work. I credit all of my colleagues. I am immensely proud of all you have done."

Colleagues, then, are the ones who can best tell the story of Fowler's contribution to Delaware Extension and UD.

"Dick was my professor for livestock production when I was a UD undergraduate," said Bob Uniatowski, extension research associate for agronomic crops. "I had grown up on a farm without livestock, and he created an interest in animals I'd never had before."

"Extension was changing a great deal when Dick took over," said Jay Windsor, Sussex County agricultural agent. "He recognized that although the number of farmers was shrinking, the clientele was expanding as was the need for extension education and outreach. Agents were under tremendous pressure with new demands, and he responded by giving his complete support."

"Committed. That's the word I'd use to describe Dick Fowler," said Joanne Whalen, extension integrated pest management specialist. "It didn't matter that I was a woman in a traditionally male field. He always has been encouraging."

Susan Barton, horticultural specialist, agrees that Fowler is supportive. "Because Dick is family-oriented, he has been understanding about family issues that sometimes conflict with the job."

In addition to serving the state, Fowler has taken on wide-ranging leadership roles regionally and nationally. These include the Extension Committee On Organization and Policy (ECOP), the National 4-H Council board of directors, and Extension Strategic Planning Council.

"Dick's dedication to Extension and the people of Delaware is evident," said Joy Sparks, state program coordinator for 4-H. "As a leader in ECOP, Dick made sure that at funding time, Delaware wasn't overlooked just because its population is less than other states."

Nancy, a school nurse in Oxford, Pa., is also retiring. The Fowlers plan to travel, visit their three sons, and enjoy more time with their new granddaughter.

Customer Service Key To Hershey's Success

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — When Don and Joyce started Hershey Equipment Company, Inc. more than 30 years ago, it was easier to commit to personable, expert service. After all, Don had a hand in every job that came along and Joyce took all the phone calls!

As the company has grown and changed, Don and Joyce have kept their commitment to quality and dependable, courteous customer service.

In keeping with this, Hershey Equipment has undergone personnel restructuring to meet their customers' needs more quickly and efficiently. Mike Dickson has been named general manager to oversee all aspects of the company, bringing every department together as a team.

Bob Armstrong, new customer service manager, comes to Hershey Equipment with many years of poultry production and management experience. Wayne Hershey, who for 21 years had been the customer service manager, has now become the purchasing manager.

Dan Shenk, who has worked for Hershey Equipment for nearly 18 years in the installation and service department, has taken over the responsibility of the new position of project manager. Shenk will be responsible for the coordination of all new projects and installations. Hershey Equipment still uses their own installation crews so that each job gets done properly and in the agreed-upon time frame. Streamlining these functions means that customers will have their new or updated facility up and running quickly.

Glenn Hess, who for over 25 years has been a key employee at Hershey Equipment, has taken over the service department. With five full-time knowledgeable servicemen available, Hershey Equipment makes sure that their customers' downtime is minimal.

In the past several years Hershey's grain division has really come into its own. The grain division includes everything from feed mills to processing to any type of grain handling system. Their staff includes seven full-time millwrights with the equipment and the knowledge needed to install, set up, and service any grain handling needs.

The sales staff, managed by Don Hershey, has an average of 25 years selling for the poultry and grain handling industry.

Hershey's also has a little-known side business in vehicle maintenance and repair that can handle everything from the inspection on the family car to a complete overhaul of a semi-truck. They also construct pre-engineered steel buildings of any size.

MYERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Glenn Wenger, president of Wenger's of Myerstown, was honored recently by the Lebanon Valley Chamber of Commerce.

Wenger became the 16th recipient of the chamber's most prestigious entrepreneurial award — the Lebanon Valley Small Business Person of the Year. The award recognizes personal entrepreneurship, staying power, innovative products and ideas, risk taking, and managerial expertise.

Program Approach To Disease Control Effective

GREENSBORO, N.C. — After years of testing, experts see the benefit of a program approach to disease control.

"Using fungicides on winter wheat, for example, is a good, solid management strategy," said Dr. Steven Leath, plant pathologist, United States Department of Agriculture, North Carolina State University.

With the price of wheat soaring, more and more growers are interested in maximizing yields. New varieties and fungicides, such as Ciba's Dividend, a new seed treatment fungicide, and Tilt®, the market leader in foliar disease control, can contribute to higher yields.

"We've tested Dividend for five years and found its broad-spectrum disease control to be very consistent," Leath said. "While Dividend seed treatment alone can produce improved yields, we also discovered that when used in conjunction with a foliar fungicide, such as Tilt, you have created a combination for success."

Dividend recently received a new label allowing double cropping after wheat harvest. Now growers in the eastern U.S. will be able to reap the benefits of Dividend that western U.S. wheat growers have enjoyed over the last two winter wheat crops.

Historically, foliar fungicides are applied at Feekes growth stage eight, but new research shows that Ciba's Tilt can be effectively applied with fertilizer at growth stage five.

BENDER IMPLEMENT

742 Edgewood Ave., Somerset, PA 15501

814-443-4611

Bender Implement Company is located at 742 South Edgewood Avenue in Somerset, still on the site where brothers Al and George Bender, in 1934, started the business.

Owner Phil Hammond says Bender Implement today offers customers a tractor product line up to 215 horsepower.

The massive red CASE IH cab tractors sitting on the lot will grab your attention, whether or not, you have something specific on your mind.

Phil categorizes Bender's implement line into four groups: tillage, planting, hay and forage, and material handling.

"We carry a good inventory," he says. "We provide new and used equipment, have parts and repair service, and will do repairs in the field or in the shop," he said.

The service area, besides Somerset, saturates some five counties, crossing into neighboring Maryland to serve customers living beyond the Mason-Dixon line.

Twelve employees fill positions in management, services, sales, parts and clerical areas. The company operates with a fleet of four vehicles -- one delivery and three service trucks -- and daily uses United Parcel Service (UPS) for outbound mailings.

Bender Implement Company, as in the past, continues to carry its line of large household appliances. Only now, the brand name is no longer International Harvester as it was in former days.

"I used to milk cows," recalls Phil, "and I put the milk into an International cooler."

Use The Three R's To Reduce Waste

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A researcher in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences recommends homeowners and farmers cut back the amount of plastic waste generated by households and farm operations by practicing the three Rs: reduce, reuse and recycle.

James Garthe, instructor in agricultural and biological engineering, said education is the key to changing how people look at managing plastic waste. Garthe, who is currently researching several agricultural recycling projects, said changing the behavior of consumers raised in a society geared toward disposable packaging and products will be a slow, but steady process if consumers make an effort to think about how to reduce or reuse plastic products.

"In some ways, Americans were more attuned to recycling in the '40s and '50s, when dairies delivered milk in glass bottles and pop bottles were returnable," Garthe said. "Today, packaging and reuse of containers have changed in the interest of economics, but it's probably time to go back to the days when companies and people were more willing to reuse things."

Garthe said the first step in controlling plastic waste is to reduce consumption of plastic products. "It sounds simple, but in many cases you don't have to use many plastic items," he said. "For example, don't take the plastic bags at the grocery store; you can use a cloth or net shopping bag as they do in Europe. At a fast food restaurant, don't take the straw or stirring stick. When you think about it, you really don't need either of those to enjoy the drink."

Garthe also recommends giving many plastic items a second life by using them in unique ways. "The plastic bag inside a cereal box is great for packing lunches," Garthe said. "Grocery bags are great for holding newspapers and plastic foam meat trays make fine artist palettes for kids' painting projects."

Garthe points out that other plastic materials can be altered or washed to increase their utility. Plastic utensils can easily be washed again and again—even in a dishwasher. Water and milk jugs can be cut at the base to serve as pans for potted plants or as trays for hardware parts.

Even large plastic containers common to farms, such as the 15-gallon bottles that dairy sanitizers come in, are easily reused. "You can cut those containers in half to make planters or use them as hampers for laundry," he said. "Even the plastic 55-gallon drums can be reused as rain barrels, garbage cans or pontoons for a raft on a farm pond."

Garthe also advises conscientious consumers to check with their community recycling center to see what materials are commonly recycled there, and plan grocery purchases accordingly. "If they recycle plastic milk jugs, then there's no reason to buy milk in the carton," he said.

Garthe does not discount taking an activist role, especially when it comes to agricultural plastic waste. Many of the plastic mulch films that plants are grown on and silage bags that animal feeds are stored in are burned after use rather than recycled. "Let your suppliers and dealers know you have a disposal problem," he said. "No one's going to do anything unless you become more vocal and make your points know."

"The alternative for farmers is not to use agricultural plastics, which is not an option for most growers," Garthe said. "Without mulch films, farming becomes much more labor-intensive. The capital investment for a greenhouse made of glass is many times what it would be for a structure made with plastic films."

Although Garthe encourages consumers and farmers to create new uses for plastic products, he warns against taking such practices to extremes. "In the end, there are just so many uses you can get out of plastics," he said.

"Still, it might be a great activity for teachers and kids to spend five to 10 minutes brainstorming other uses for a plastic milk jug. You could give prizes to the student who comes up with the most practical solutions."

Consortium Forms To Give Ag Voice

MONTEREY, Calif. — Stretching from coast to coast, programs throughout the United States have joined together to form the Consortium of State Agriculture in the Classroom Programs.

The consortium will promote state and national efforts to help children, youth, teacher and other adults acquire a better understanding of agriculture. One of its first activities will be to call for and organize a National Coalition for Agricultural Literacy.

"The consortium is organized to ensure that our population understands the important role agriculture plays in our society as this country's greatest natural asset," said Mark Linder, consortium planning committee chairperson. "The consortium will help Agriculture in the Classroom programs achieve greater public recognition of the need for expanding agricultural awareness."

Agriculture in the Classroom (AIRC) programs have been developed in all 50 states. Established in 1981 and supported by the United States Department of Agriculture, many state AIRC programs provide instructional materials and teacher training to pre-kindergarten through college classrooms.

"People who know about Agriculture in the Classroom recognize the success of our education programs that increase the awareness of agriculture's important role in our economy and society," said Betty Wolanyk, national director for Agriculture in the Classroom.

Representatives from the states met in Monterey, Calif. to discuss the need to expand the awareness of AIRC programs. By organizing the consortium, Linder said a national voice has been created to support efforts at local, state and national levels. The consortium planning committee will be comprised of two representatives from each of five regions, including New England, Mid-Atlantic, Southeastern, Midwestern and Western.

According to Doty Wenzel, director of the Florida AIRC program, Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, Agriculture in the Classroom has been successful because of the many dedicated volunteers who participate in education programs for students and teachers in every state and because of the teachers who recognize the need to incorporate information about agriculture into their curriculum.

"We applaud the thousands of teachers across the nation who recognize the importance of integrating information about agriculture in their classrooms and schools," Wolanyk said.

LCI Urges USDA To Extend Comment

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — LCI Executive Director Glenn Slack has written a letter to Dr. Donald Luchsinger, deputy administrator for veterinary services, requesting that the comment period for the proposal to amend the regulations concerning importation of animals and animal products (#94-106-1) be extended by 60 days. The comment period is set to expire on July 17.

At LCI's Annual Meeting held in April, the board of directors passed a resolution requesting that the comment period be extended to allow additional time for adequate review and comment by all interested parties.

In his letter Slack writes, "The established 90-day comment period is not sufficient time for adequate review of the 127-page comprehensive document which was published in the Federal Register on April 18, 1996. We request that action be taken by your office to secure an extension to the comment period."

Mopac, Wendy's Enter Venture

SOUDERTON (Montgomery Co.) — Moyer Packing Company (Mopac) and Wendy's Old Fashioned Hamburgers recently entered into a venture that will tie the two together in the fast-food business.

On June 17, Mopac began the production of two- and four-ounce hamburger patties for Wendy's restaurants. Mopac will produce hamburger patties for restaurants located across Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Maine, Virginia, West Virginia, Delaware, Vermont, and Massachusetts.

"This is an excellent entree into the fast food business which Mopac sees as one of the fastest growing and important aspects of our food industry," said Mopac Vice President of Sales and Marketing Bob Line. "Over 50 percent of the consumer food dollar is spent on food eaten outside of the home."

The contract with Wendy's marks the single largest capital investment for any single Mopac customer. According to Jack Gartner, Mopac's Beef Division director of sales and marketing, more than $4 million has been spent to get the new production started. Prior to the agreement with Wendy's, Mopac did not produce ground beef in the form of a patty, but rather in larger five- and ten-pound portions called "chubs."

Program Approach

Three years of research from Dr. P.M. Phipps, Tidewater Agricultural Research and Extension Center, Virginia Polytechnic Institute (VPI), shows that Tilt (4 ounce rate per acre) used on winter wheat at growth stage five yields statistically equal to Tilt applied at growth stage eight.

"The growth stage five option gives growers additional flexibility in managing their foliar disease control program. At growth stage five, growers can apply Tilt with fluid fertilizer, saving time and money," said Charles Flippin, Ciba Crop Protection cereal crop manager.

REMEMBER
 The Summer and Fall of 1995???? The extreme heat, the early dry-down of the corn crop, and then the rapid rise in corn prices? And those corn prices are having a dramatic effect on your profits in 1996.
 "THE NEED FOR QUALITY FEED AND GRAIN STORAGE IS GREATER TODAY THAN AT ANY TIME IN RECENT HISTORY!"
 How can we help to make sure that you get a quality corn storage unit constructed before the expected rush in August and September?
 Give us a call to discuss early discounts, financing, and unloader options.
 Before spending a lot of money to dry, store, handle, and transport your corn crop, you will do well to consider the many advantages of a poured concrete silo to store and protect your valuable corn.
 Also, by storing hi-moisture shelled corn (about 25% moisture), you save field losses, and increase digestibility.

Cattle Producers Seek Prompt Action

WASHINGTON, D.C. — It was good news and bad news as 150 Farmers Union livestock producers took their concerns with concentration in the livestock sector to Washington recently. Fly-in participants told representatives from the justice and agriculture departments they believe concentration is a major contributor to the disastrously-low prices cattle producers have experienced over the past two years, and that many producers will not be able to make it through another year without a significant upturn.

On one hand, producers were encouraged by the access they had to top officials in the Clinton administration and to their familiarity with the concentration issue. On the other hand, frustration surfaced as they came to grips with the fact that a comprehensive solution may not come as quickly as they and their fellow producers would like.

Meeting at the White House, David Turetsky, deputy assistant attorney of the Justice Department's Antitrust Division, told Farmers Union members there's only so much the department can do under current antitrust laws. "I know that there are concerns out there in light of some real facts about concentration. We're going to remain sensitive and available and keep looking and encouraging people to come forward if they have information," said Turetsky.

U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Assistant Secretary of Marketing and Regulatory Programs Michael Dunn, who has been charged with implementing recommendations made by USDA's Advisory Committee on Agriculture Concentration, told fly-in participants that the committee report indicated that, "Concentration is a problem in the industry and that there is widespread belief that packer concentration is excessive and has been used to depress prices."

Cattle producers participating in the meeting with Dunn thanked him for his attention to the issue and urged him to act as quickly and decisively as possible.

"The bottom line is that producers are receiving record low prices while retailers charge record high prices for beef and the packing companies pull down unprecedented profits," said fly-in participant R.C. Patterson, a Kim, Colo., cow-calf operator.

Producers candidly shared story after story with both officials of not having marketing options for their animals. One producer said he had to ship animals several states away for processing. Others told of having only one buyer in their area.

In addition to cattle producers, the Farmers Union delegation included hog producers, contract poultry producers, rural bankers, and county commissioners representing areas hard hit by the slump in the cattle market. Hog and poultry producers say concentration and vertical integration in agriculture also have a tremendous impact on their ability to make a profit.

National Farmers Union has for many years pointed to the dangers associated with concentration and vertical integration. According to USDA statistics, four firms now control 87 percent of all red meat processing. In addition, these firms market finished products and feed livestock for slaughter. NFU advocates legislative and other measures aimed at increasing competition in the agricultural structure.

G.S. Students Represent Lancaster At Envirothon

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — On Saturday, June 22, five students from Garden Spot High School competed against 60 teams statewide for the state Envirothon title.

The Garden Spot team scored in the top 20 (15th). The State Envirothon was held at the PP&L Montour Preserve in Montoursville, and sponsored by Hershey Foods Corporation.

The Garden Spot team was coached by Garden Spot Ag Educators Bob Lauffer and Bruce Stajnrach. The competing students were Eric Zimmerman, Andy Weaver, Junior Zeiset, Greg Yoder, and Jason Mountz. The teams were tested on five different outdoor topics: aquatics, forestry, soils, wildlife, and a current issue topic, which was greenways.

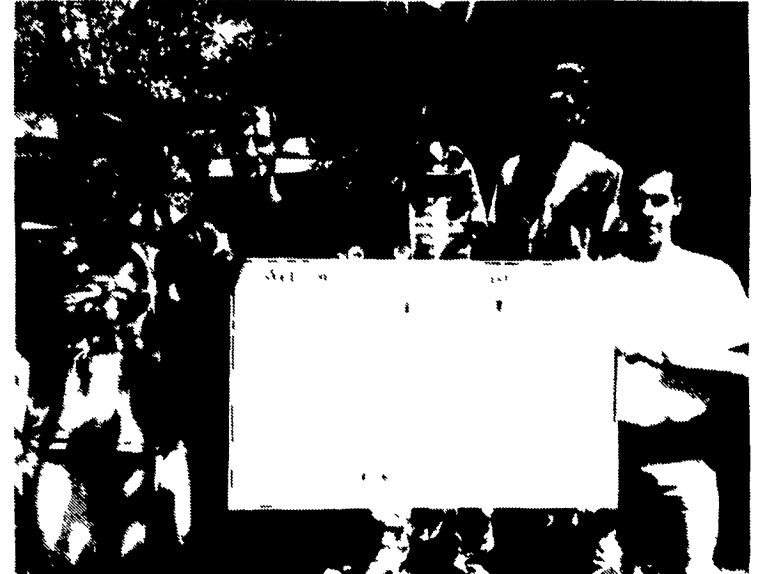

Garden Spot came in first at the Lancaster County Senior Envirothon in May held at Lancaster County Park. A total of 26 high school teams competed in this countywide event. Garden Spot teams took first and second, and Conestoga Valley High School came in third.

The contest is sponsored by the Lancaster County Conservation District and receives donated time and funds from the Lancaster County Parks and Recreation Department, the Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission, the Pennsylvania Game Commission, the Natural Resources Conservation Service, the Lancaster County Planning Commission, and Pennsylvania Power and Light (PP&L). This year, PP&L donated $300 toward the contest.

At the State Competition, Schuylkill County came in first and will continue on to the national competition July 28-August 1 at Mahoney State Park in Ashland, Neb. Westmoreland County came in second place, with York County taking third place.

To learn how your school can participate in an Envirothon, contact the Lancaster County Conservation District, (717) 299-5361.

Certified Hereford Beef Expands Midwest, Southeast Markets

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Certified Hereford Beef (CHB) availability made major strides the week of June 17 with the product's debut in the Cleveland, Ohio, area and in northeast Alabama.

Finast, a leading grocery chain in Cleveland, has devoted full cases to CHB in their 42 upscale stores, making the product available to some 1.5 million potential customers. In Alabama, Gregersons Foods, Inc., is selling the high quality beef in its Anniston and Oxford stores.

Both grand openings highlighted presentations from grocery and CHB officials, displays of live cattle from area Hereford herds, and well-promoted media events. Finast's opening celebrations were held near Cleveland's celebrated Rock and Roll Hall of Fame, a local attraction drawing hundreds of thousands of people to the area's renovated waterfront area. In Gregerson's opening at Gadsden, grilled CHB steaks samples were distributed to introduce customers to the flavor and tenderness of the product.

According to CHB program director Craig Huffhines, the opening of these two new retail outlets will expand sales of CHB by 20 million pounds annually, representing 70,000 head of feeder cattle.

"The featuring of CHB in Finast and Gregersons grocery stores opens tremendous opportunities," Huffhines said. "We expect demand and resulting sales to rapidly escalate as consumers in these two areas become acquainted with the overall high quality of Hereford beef."

Both chains initially tested CHB because of consumers' desire for consistent, juicy, tender and flavorful beef. Three years of scientific research conducted at Colorado State University proved that steaks from Hereford cattle consistently rated superior to USDA commodity beef in these traits, thus meeting consumer demand. From these studies, CHB was introduced by the American Hereford Association, marketing the product nationwide. The product's live animal identification, controlled feeding regime, and packing house certification help guarantee a high level of eating satisfaction for CHB.

Finast and Gregersons join a growing list of CHB accounts nationwide. The program has six major food service distributors, a major restaurant chain, and six retail chains which will require nearly 100,000 head of Hereford and Hereford-cross cattle annually.

Beneficial Insects, Environment Suffer From Bug Zappers

NEWARK, Del. — Who would have thought the blacklights of the '60s would come back with a vengeance in the '90s?

Enterprising entrepreneurs have marketed bug zappers, complete with blacklights and electric grids, to consumers who want to keep their summer evenings free from biting flies, notably mosquitoes. The consumer is lulled into a sense of safety by the satisfying sizzle of a bug frying.

That same sound sets Dr. Doug Tallamy's nerves on edge. The University of Delaware entomologist said the problem is not just a false sense of security for consumers — the zappers do little to reduce the biting-fly population — but the impact that the zappers have on species of beneficial insects.

Tallamy said it's not news to entomologists that most species of mosquitoes don't respond to blacklights and that certain mosquitoes bite only during the day, anyway. But something is getting fried in those traps.

The entomologist enlisted the aid of Newark High School student Tim Frick to find out exactly which insects were being cooked. Over the summer of 1994, they collected and identified the kill from zappers at six sites in suburban Newark. The results disturbed Tallamy's environmental sensibilities — and should disturb others, he maintains.

Only 31 of the nearly 14,000 electrocuted insects were biting flies. That's less than a quarter of a percent. Species from more than 104 nontarget insect families were destroyed. Almost half of these were aquatic insects: caddisflies and midges. To the untrained eye, midges look like mosquitoes. But to a trained entomologist and to a balanced ecosystem, there is a big difference.

"Midges don't feed on mammalian blood or spread disease," Tallamy said. "And they are an important part of the aquatic food chain as larvae. Diminishing their population has an effect on other populations, including the frogs and fish that feed on them. As adults, the midges are an important food item for nesting birds.

"I don't believe that the companies are purposely fooling the public. They claim their products kill insects and they do. Many of the electrocuted insects look like mosquitoes — an undesirable insect — but they are not."

Tallamy said approximately 1 million zappers are sold each year. Based on numbers collected during his study, if 4 million traps are used for 40 nights, then 71 billion non-target insects are needlessly destroyed by misinformed homeowners.

"The heavy toll on nontarget insects and the near absence of biting flies in catches suggests that electric insect traps are worthless for biting-fly reduction," Tallamy said, "and probably are counterproductive to consumers and the larger ecosystem."

The exclusive design of the Agri-Chopper gives you unequalled performance.

The cutting rotor is made up of numerous rigid blades. It's weight, acting like a flywheel, never sends an abrupt shock to the tractor's power take-off. No gear box, belt or chain is used to drive the rotor, eliminating any risk of unnecessary breakdown

Thanks to it's blower, the Agri-Chopper can be used for various farm operations, such as cutting up round bales of wet hay used to feed the herd, blowing dry hay into a TMR mixer, spreading straw in free stalls, chopping corn stalks to serve as bedding. Many poultry producers use the Agri-Chopper to reduce their bedding costs

The blower on the Agri-Chopper-H is equipped with a chute that pivots 360° and can throw material up to 20 feet. This blower was designed to work equally well with wet hay as with dry hay

The blower on the Agri-Chopper-P is strong enough to blow straw or dry hay in a 10 inch diameter flexible hose 50 feet long

GEHL Scavenger® Manure Spreaders

In Stock
at Binkley & Hurst

THE BEST JUST GOT BETTER!

Better Performance. Gehl Scavenger®, the original V-tank spreader, has built a well-deserved reputation for delivering unmatched performance in a wide variety of materials. The new Scavenger takes that performance to the next level with even better spreading patterns in the toughest heavily-bedded manures.

Increased Durability. Not only has the new Scavenger been designed to out-perform all other V-tank spreaders, but the main drive system components have been beefed-up for extra durability and increased dependability.

Why is Scavenger the Best? One big reason is the unique new round-core auger. This auger features segmented paddles grouped in a spiral pattern. This fighting configuration delivers more material to the discharge expeller in less time for faster unloading. The paddles are precisely positioned to deliver more uniform feeding to the discharge expeller. This exceptional design breaks up and blends all types of manure.

The auger is hydraulically powered both up and down (unlike competitive units that use springs, gravity or fixed augers). This design provides more control to chop through bridged material or power down through heavy beds.

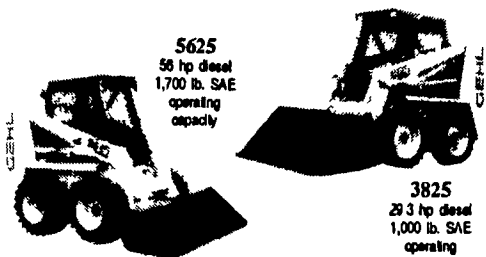

Outstanding Application Control. Gehl's proven Variflo discharge system has been made even better. It's 33 percent wider on the Model 1315. On all new models the expeller assembly has been significantly strengthened. New square-tooth expeller paddles spread smoothly and evenly. You choose the rate you want, from heavy spring-time spreading to light top-dressing. With Scavenger you have complete control right at your fingertips.

Scavenger is Simply Better. The Gehl Scavenger is a simple spreader. It's solid and durable with sealed, welded tank construction and a full length channel steel sub-frame. Every Scavenger is built to deliver top performance year after year.

Your Gehl Dealer can show you why the new Scavenger V-tank spreader is still the best.

Gehl TMR Mixer Feeders Are #1

GEHL

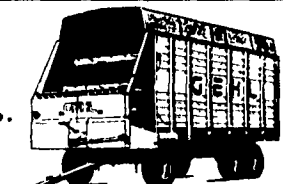

Nothing can maximize the return on investment in your dairy or beef feeding operation like a Total Mixed Ration (TMR) feeding system. And nothing makes TMR work better than a Gehl mixer feeder. Here's why:

- Better Mixing Action — Unique four-auger design creates a double figure-8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.
- Energy Efficient — Planetary drive system requires less horsepower.
- Built To Last — Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life.
- Six Sizes — From 150 to 500 cubic feet mixing capacities
- Three Styles — Trailer type, stationary and truck-mounted units to fit your operation.

New Cas IH Model 8530 Baler In Stock For High Speed Baling, Also One Used Baler In Stock!

This Baler Can Save Thousands Of Dollars With Increased Milk Production In Greatly Reduced Heat Loss Obtained With Our Direct Feed Crop Flow System (Unbiased Testing Has Proven The Facts)

Your Best Buy in Balers is From Binkley & Hurst Bros., Inc.

The Baler That Works!

WHY STRAIGHT IS BETTER THAN SIDEWAYS...

- Reason #1 Transport width ranges from 7'11" to only 8'88" on our 8550 Model. Conventional balers are generally 1-foot wider in transport.
- Reason #2 No need to widen our baler out once you're in the field or narrowing when leaving the field. The conventional baler must be narrowed and widened. Reduced time and effort means money.

Let's Get Together Today, Call And Ask For Landis

- Reason #3 Never a need to pick up bales when opening a field and cropping them on the ground - you can even leave the bale thrower on and drop the back chute. Since the baler and tractor straddle the windrow, the bales dropped on the ground from previous rounds never interfere with the operation.
- Reason #4 Gauge wheels are mounted on both sides for better performance. Not so with conventional balers.
- Reason #5 Our pickup is half the height of conventional balers. This means less leaves are lost because less travel distance up and over the pickup is required. An optional hydraulic pickup lift is even available.
- Reason #6 Conventional balers use high maintenance cross feeders or sweep arms to move hay to the chamber. Our baler feeds hay from the pickup straight into the chamber by the use of a simple stuffer mechanism. Leaves don't fall to the bottom of the chamber and later fall out the back. Due to our design, leaves are placed evenly throughout the bale - the leaves are not given time to settle to the bottom.
- Reason #7 Due to our design, our plunger stroke distance is 25-30% less than conventional balers. Example: John Deere 327, 337, 347 and 467 Models = 30" stroke. Case IH 8520 = 21" stroke and a high of 23" on our 8550. The result: Less wear, less side to side stress force and less repairs!
- Reason #8 The clearance of our needles from the ground far exceeds conventional balers due to the high position of our chamber. This translates to less breakage and bending of the needles due to hitting high places in the field, etc.
- Reason #9 We have equal baler weight distribution on both carrying wheels for easier handling and less side pull on hills.
- Reason #10 The distance from the end of our bale chamber to the thrower belts is enough so that the thrower doesn't fight the bale. I.e., the bale is not still wedged in the chamber when the thrower first contacts the bale.
- Reason #11 Our bale edges are sharp and corners are square on all types of hay - excellent when stackers are used or hay is hauled by truck.
- Reason #12 Proven and reliable Deering type knotters on all center line balers.

SHOOT AT ...
BUT CAN'T HIT!

It doesn't matter how you define AXIAL FLOW PRODUCTIVITY:

- 1) How many ACRES you harvest per day?
- 2) How many BUSHELS you harvest per hour?
- 3) How Many HOURS per year to harvest all your crops?

A 2100 SERIES AXIAL FLOW COMBINE PUTS MORE QUALITY GRAIN IN THE BIN AND LEAVES LESS IN THE FIELD per HOUR, per DAY, or per YEAR than ANY COMPETITORS COMBINE!

PURINA PROFILE

In 1962, Les Gehman along with another partner formed G&G Feed & Supply, Inc., Manheim, to bring dairy and livestock feed to farmers directly off railroad cars. In the '70's, the Cassel Mill located south of town was purchased and that is when they began their milling operation. Several months ago, G&G became a Purina dealer to supply Northern Lancaster County with the products and services that can best come from a national, long-time company with quality feeds and extensive nutritional support personnel.

"With the advent of the TMR mixer on the farm, farmers handle their feeding programs differently," Gehman said. "Now they need expert advice from recognized nutritionists who help them balance their homegrown grains and forages with protein and mineral supplements. Because Purina has such a good nutritional support team, farmers get this good nutritional advice right along with the price of the purchased feed."

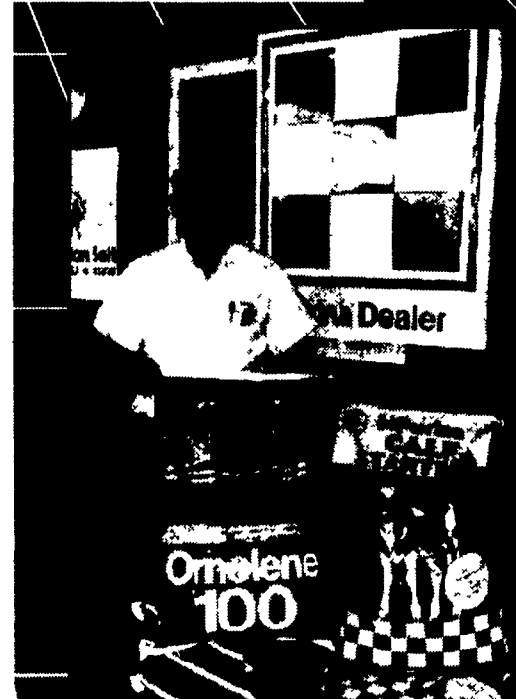

Gehman also sees the long term stability of Purina as a great reason for farmers to choose Purina Chows to feed their cows and other livestock. He says that some of the same Purina brand named feeds that were manufactured when he was a teenager are still being produced today.

"I find that in serving the public, a lot of companies change names and feeds, and by the time the public gets acquainted with the product, a new name and design comes out and you have to learn all over again," Gehman said. "Not only is this confusing, it adds potential mistakes in feeding rations."

G&G carries a full line of Purina products available at their store or for delivery by their extensive, well managed fleet of trucks. In addition, with local forage analysis and the Purina nutritionist's on-farm recommendations, an individualized feed ration can be developed and manufactured for the customer within two days of when a change in nutritional needs is discovered. Of course, modern computers and fax machines make this quick turn-around time possible.

Gehman believes the future of farming and therefore the future of his business in Lancaster County is bright. Actually, the number of farms has increased in his service area because Amish farmers often divide larger farms into two smaller farms to accommodate their needs. Farmers in this area also have good climate and good marketing opportunities.

"Presently, we have no intention of moving out of the business or changing it," Gehman said. "As long as we have our health, we enjoy what we are doing. And our farmers are a good group to serve. We have one of the prime territories in the United States. That makes doing business a pleasure for us."

Les Gehman, owner, shows horse and calf feeds that are part of Purina's fine line of products.
